Bank Teller Is Shot Without Warning; Near Death.

Armed Thugs Loot District Stores

Police Hold Several Suspects in Drive on Crime Wave.

A crazed gunman was at large last night, two of his victims were reported near death and a merchant was recovering from gunshot wounds as police sought to curb a week-end wave of holdups and robberies throughout the Northwest section.

Nearly a dozen suspects, including an escaped convict, were rounded up by special squads of police after Newell T. Styles, 35, a bank teller, was shot and wounded critically as he parked his automobile near Ninth and M streets northwest.

Styles was wounded in an unprovoked attack by a drink-crazed colored gunman. As Styles stood beside his parked car, the colored man approached and demanded:

"Who do you think you are looking at?"

Not Given a Chance.

Before the bank teller could answer, the man drew a gun and opened fire. Bullets struck Styles in the groin and abdomen. Physicians at Emergency Hospital hold little hope for his recovery.

Police believe the same gunman shot James Johnson, colored, 38, near Ninth and N streets northwest, a few minutes earlier. Johnson was also shot in the abdomen. He was reported near death at Garfield Hospital. Johnson told police his assailant fired without provocation.

James said the bandits entered his store as he was preparing to close. With drawn guns they ordered him and Sylvester Bowie, 25, a customer, to back against a wall.

"Keep your hands up. This is a hold-up," they commanded.

As James passed a counter he grabbed a revolver. One of the robbers was rifling a cash drawer when the storekeeper wheeled and fired. His shot went wild and one of the gunmen returned the shots.

Power Survey Wins Approval

Manly Announces U. S. Check to Include Light Rates, Entire Setup.

Approval of its plans for a National power survey and investigation of electric light and power rates was obtained by the Federal Power Commission in a fortnight's series of conferences with Federal, State and municipal agencies and representatives of private companies, it was announced yesterday.

"These conferences," an announcement from Basil Manly, commissioner in charge, said, "explored every phase of the power survey and the rate investigation and considered in great detail the form in which the municipal plants and private companies would best be able to furnish the statistics and other information necessary to present a complete picture of the existing conditions in the industry and its probable future development.

"Representatives of both the public and private agencies unanimously pledged to the commission the fullest measure of cooperation in the compilation of the desired information.

"General agreement was expressed by the representatives of both the public and private agencies upon the following points:

"That a survey of the Nation's power requirements and resources and a compilation of the rates charged for electric light and power by municipal and private plants is timely and should be of interest not only to all classes of consumers but helpful also to the executives of public and private plants in the future economic development of the Nation's power resources.

"That the books, records and special studies of both public and private companies should be open to inspection by the agents of the commission and that full cooperation should be accorded in the compilation of the detailed statistics required."

Hit-Run Auto Crushes Man.

Ribs crushed, Francis O'Brien, 32, of the 1600 block of Girard street northeast, is in an undetermined condition at Gallinger Hospital, police say, after having been struck by a hit-run automobile yesterday at Tenth and O streets northwest.

Gang Guns Menace Bremer Kidnap Quiz

JOHN J. McLAUGHLIN

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Federal agents raced the underworld today in efforts to apprehend the abductors of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, whose freedom early this year cost $200,000.

Authorities with five persons in custody in the case here—two of whose identies were shrouded in mystery—intimated they were fearful gangland guns might get to others they seek before they could be arrested or make any disclosures to the investigators.

Fears for the safety of those who might talk about Bremer ransom money aparently were well founded. The authorities based them on the connection they believe exists between the Bremer kidnapers and the ramifications of a huge "hot money" ring operated in several cities for years. The ring is ac-

Dillinger Hunt Enters Ninth Futile Week

450 Suspected Aids of Outlaw Are Under Surveillance.

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—The greatest man hunt the country has witnessed in years today entered its ninth week.

Its scope had stretched from the northern Wisconsin wild lands, where, a week ago, John Dillinger and his liegemen shot their way out of a Federal agents' trap, to the verge of the Atlantic.

As relentless as their quarries are ruthless, the Government men and their allies, police and constabulary of almost a dozen States, were alert to every clew and every rumored sighting of the gang leader whose depredations have resulted in 13 deaths.

Reports current here said the pursuers have more than 450 individuals, suspected of possible connections with members of the gang, under surveillance. Many are former convicts.

In the major sectors of the chase, which started March 3, when Dillinger bluffed his way out of the Crown Point, Ind., jail, and was intensified by last Sunday's shooting fray which left two dead and four wounded, belief persisted that the gang had split into two or more wings.

In northern Minnesota search for George (Baby Face) Nelson, the machine gunner blamed for the slaying of W. Carter Baum, Federal agent, last Sunday night, was continued. Nelson was believed to have one companion with him. Yesterday a Marshfield, Wis., auto dealer reported to police there he had sold a used automobile to a man answering Nelson's description.

Officers combed the Indiana lake regions today for four gasoline station robbers, one of whom was tentatively identified as Howard Van Meter, close pal of the arch criminal.

Dillinger was "sighted" in Wilmette, a Chicago suburb, and at Binghamton, N. Y., within a few hours.

Nats' 2 Runs In Ninth Beat Macks, 7 to 6

By Frank H. Young.

Manager Joe Cronin was the Nats leader in fact as well as in name at Griffith Stadium yesterday, as the 15,000 fans who risked pneumonia will attest. Joe came up in the ninth, with the Philadelphia Athletics leading by a run and two Nats on the pathway, blasted out a liner-double to right, which emptied the bases, and the home team thus won its third successive game. The count was 7 to 6.

It was rather tough for Jimmy Foxx that Cronin came through with his telling blow, because, for the second consecutive game, the league's 1933 home-run king was forced to play second fiddle when it came to awarding the hero palms. Jimmy, who poled out a round tripper Saturday with the bases filled and still had to see his team take a licking, crashed out another yesterday, this time with two on.

Take Lead Again.

Yesterday's blow, a screaming drive into the sun-god parlor in left, gave the Mackmen a five-run lead before Starter Al Crowder had been able to get a man out in the third.

Cronin later called in Bob Burke, Ray Prim, Jack Russell and Al Thomas, with Burke performing yoeman service and holding the A's in check while the Nats were evening the count at five-all.

Foxx then decided to take things in his own hands in the seventh. Prim, on the hill, had managed to get one out when he walked Cole-

Dead Dog, Restored to Life, Sleeps Way Back to Normalcy

Berkeley, Calif., April 29 (AP). "Thirteen," the dog whose recorded life history began with his clinical death, continues to gain strength in a University of California laboratory today, 16 days after his scientific "rebirth."

Records kept by Dr. Robert E. Cornish, young research worker, who is conducting the life restoration experiment, show the animal has exhibited steady physical improvement, although still semiconscious.

Following is the record of "Thirteen's" progress, as kept by Dr. Cornish:

Friday, April 13, 3:58 p. m.—Started giving dog ether.

4:01 p. m.—Dog unconscious.

4:06 p. m.—Breathing stopped.

4:08 p. m.—Heart stopped beating. Death occurred according to medical standards.

4:11 p. m.—Started resuscitation.

4:12 p. m.—Injected 150 C. C.'s of adrenalin, heparin and defibrinated blood.

4:12½ p. m.—Heart beats and breathing started. Dog restored to life.

4:30 p. m.—Dog barked.

10:35 p. m.—Heart rate increased alarmingly. A solution of gum arabic injected.

Saturday April 14, 12:40 a. m.—Heart rate normal.

11 a. m.—Heart rate again increased. Dog near death. Three hundred C. C.'s salt solution injected.

6:08 p. m.—Heart rate normal.

Sunday, April 15—Glucose injections given to nourish dog.

Thursday, April 19—Another crisis averted by salt solution injections.

Saturday, April 21—Dog ate liver, started to gain weight.

Trio Escape Jail Waiting For Dillinger

Ohio Penitentiary Guard Is Made Victim of Convicts' Ruse.

Break Comes at Prison Prepared to Thwart Delivery.

Columbus, Ohio, April 29 (AP). double-locked to prevent any possibility of John Dillinger's attempting to deliver his former henchmen within its walls, Ohio State Penitentiary this afternoon lost three convicts by a ruse as simple as it was effective.

The trio, acting as though they were going to do repair work on a guard tower, gained admittance to the turret, disarmed a guard and dropped over the outer wall to freedom.

They escaped, armed with a pistol, which they had used to carry out their ruse, as well as the guard's weapons, a sawed-off shotgun and a rifle, using a relay of two stolen automobiles to flee the city.

The trio was identified as Rufus Deeds, 40, a robber; Arthur R. Koontz, 40, automobile thief, and Martin Schmidt, 37, a robber.

Highways Guarded.

Warden Preston E. Thomas ordered all highways guarded as the trio was reported to have fled northwest from Columbus toward Marysville, 30 miles away.

Not a shot was fired.

The method of escape matched in cleverness any escape in the history of the prison. Here is the story as patched together by Warden Thomas:

Koontz, Deeds and Schmidt, employed in the prison powerhouse with about a dozen other convicts, obtained a pistol in a manner as yet undetermined.

One of them drew that weapon this afternoon in the power house, and held up the other convicts as well as three civilian employes, including the chief engineer.

Forced Into Ashpit.

The main party, with the exception of the chief engineer, was forced into the ashpit of the power house and locked in.

Then the chief engineer was forced at gun point to summon a guard, who was ordered to get a ladder.

This the trio carried with them out into the prison yard, the guard escorting them at gun point. They laughed and complained jokingly about having to work on Sunday as they propped the ladder against the high wall at the northwest tower.

The faking duped the guard on duty. He thought the men actually were under a guard's supervision.

When the trio reached the tiny guard room the attendant was disarmed. Confronted by the barrel of their single pistol he surrendered his two weapons, shotgun and rifle.

Jump to Freedom.

A passer-by who sought to restrain them as they stole an automobile was threatened with their enlarged arsenal.

That stolen car carried them to the city limits. There another automobile was reported stolen.

The escape was made in the face of detailed preparations against outbreaks rising from the continual fear that John Dillinger might attempt to deliver three of his gunmates sent there for the slaying of Sheriff Sarber at Lima, Ohio, last fall. They are Charles Makely, Harry Pierpont and Russell Clark.

Stokowski Audience 'Votes' New Contract

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP).—Basing his decision on the verdict of an audience, Leopold Stokowski has agreed to accept the renewal of his contract as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Stokowski's 10-year agreement with the Philadelphia Orchestra Association expired with the final concert of the 1933-34 season last night. As he finished the last number he put the question to his audience. A vigorous burst of applause decided the matter.

British Labor Unions Open War on Fascism

London, April 29 (AP).—The London Trades Council, it was learned today, has launched a move to combat Fascism in the United Kingdom.

Representatives of 250,000 trade unionists have been called to meet May 24 and seek means to counteract what they see as danger in movements such as the one led by black-shirted Sir Oswald Mosley.

Turk, Claiming 160 Years, Fights Malady

Istanbul, Turkey, April 29 (AP).—Zaro Agha, who claims he's 160 and the world's oldest person, fought ruggedly in the National Children's Hospital today. His 70-year-old grandson kept watch at the bedside.

Doctors said he showed surprising resistance, such as might be expected from a much younger person. He is suffering from Bright's disease.

Stimson Aids Tariff Plans Of Roosevelt

Speech Is Unexpected Support for Control by Executive.

Flays 'Dictator' Charge; Revision by Congress Held Too Slow.

By Kendall Foss.

Picturing restoration of foreign trade as the only alternative to rigid curtailment and regiment of domestic economy, former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson came out last night in favor of President Roosevelt's tariff program.

The unexpected support for executive control of tariff making came over a Nation-wide network broadcasting a speech made by Hoover's senior Cabinet member before the Intercollegiate Council of International Cooperation.

"I am not impressed," the speaker said, "with the objection it (the pending tariff legislation) would give undue or dictatorial powers to our Executive. It does not seem to me such objections are well founded . . . I see no reason to believe the powers will be abused."

While at least some of his hearers were recovering from this statement, the speaker went on to dismiss general revision of tariff laws by Congress as entirely ineffective to meet the situation which exists today.

Emergency Promptness Cited.

"It would be far too slow. In each of the other nations the power to handle their commercial relations is very differently organized. They have vested far greater powers of initiative in their executives, and their executives can act with much greater promptness in an emergency than can be done by our Congress or even our Tariff Commission under our present laws."

In every parliametnary government, the speaker went on, the executive, in the person of the prime minister, frames the tariff with a view to the national requirements and its ratification by the parliament is usually a matter of course.

Objections that such a practice puts too much power in the hands of the executive are similar to objections raised when the executive budget was first proposed. The executive budget has the President propose an annual program for expenditures, the Congress, or in the case of the States, the Legislatures, examine it and ratify it.

"Today we see the executive budget working in the Federal Government and in the government of nearly all the States without any impairment of constitutional liberty whatever," Stimson added.

Agricultural Warning Given.

"Executive tariff making is the only way in the world today to maintain and increase foreign trade and a flourishing foreign trade is the only alternative to the withdrawal of 50,000,000 acres of farm land from cultivation," Stimson explained, citing Secretary Wallace's pamphlet, "America Must Choose."

A great scramble is going on in the world for foreign trade. Many of the steps which the governments take are dictated by emergencies of the moment. But many may result in permanently fixing the channels of future trade. The United States is being shouldered out of these

Quantico, Va., April 29 (AP).—Twenty-one Marine Corps planes will leave at 6 a. m. tomorrow for maneuvers with the United States fleet in the Caribbean.

The squadron, which will fly to Miami tomorrow night, will assist a brigade of marines now with the fleet in the extensive war games in the vicinity of Cuba and Puerto Rico.

Commanded by Lieut. Col. Ross E. Rowell, the squadron consists of 19 Boeing single-seaters and two transport planes, carrying mechanics and radio operators. An amphibian with a crew of three went to Miami today.

The flight will involve 5,000 miles of flying, 3,000 miles over tropical country, and 800 over open sea. The squadron will refuel at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Jacksonville.

30 Workers Missing In Lumber Holocaust

Bucharest, Rumania, April 29. (U.P.).—Thirty workers were trapped by fire in a lumber plant near Brasov today. Six escaped with severe injuries, and were rushed to a hospital. The others were feared lost.

Troops were dispatched to combat fires breaking out in many sections of the Carpathian Mountains, due to the exceptionally dry spring.

Man Leaps 135 Feet From New York Bridge

New York, April 29 (AP).—Frank Cushing, 31, jumped 135 feet from the center span of Manhattan Bridge today into the East River. He was taken unconscious to a hospital.

Cushing jumped with an iron plate strapped to his body, which, he said, enabled him to drop in a vertical line and not hit the water flat.

Industries Tell Johnson Blanket Pay Increases Would Block Recovery

'Cheesecloth Ladies' Thrill Mr. Wallace

Secretary Rhapsodizes Over White's Conception of Farmer's Life, but Tugwell and Bruce Aren't Quite So Sure.

"Excellent" said Secretary Wallace after staring a while at Gilbert White's 40-foot mural of the "Ladies in Cheesecloth" privately unveiled yesterday afternoon in the Department of Agriculture.

Right Hand Man Rexford Guy Tugwell said nothing. Earlier he had expressed dissatisfaction with the classical treatment favored by Mr. White.

Coiner of the phrase "ladies in cheesecloth," Edward Bruce, director of the Public Works of Art project, decided against making any comment. Mr. White delivered a spirited defense of his work.

Said Secretary Wallace:

"The composition is excellent and the classical spirit conforms splendidly with the architecture (Greek) of the building. The coloring, too, is lovely, and the lighting is fine. I only regret that I could not converse with the artist in Latin. It would have made the classical atmosphere complete."

Free of any trace of modernity such as tractors, combines, or even overalls, the mural depicts symbolic figures resting after a day in the fields. Cybele (the earth) is there and so is Ceres, goddess of good crops.

Beneath the picture are the words:

"O fortunates nimium, sua si bona norint, Agricolas."

This appears to mean "Happy would be the men of the fields if they knew their good fortune."

It expresses a wonderful ideal, Wallace said, "but hardly the sort of view we would expect our farmers to entertain at the present time. Perhaps it is just as well most farmers don't read Latin."

Several nodded thoughtfully at this point. They did not say why.

"The painting," Wallace went on, "is not the sort of thing that would naturally spring from the American soil today. It is, in a sense, an expression of a myth, a dream, an ideal. It is splendid as a specimen of the classical style and Mr. White is to be congratulated on carrying it out this way."

Only two minor differences of opinion cloud the harmony between the painter and the Secretary: something about the size of one of

House Debate On Stocks Bill Starts Today

Britten Flays Measure as Brain Child of Radical "Scarlet Fever Boys."

Facing bitter opposition, but backed by a strongly worded majority report, the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill will be debated for seven hours by the House today, with no "gag" on amendments.

The most recent attack upon the measure came last night from Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, who declared "the real object of the bill is to Russianize everything worthwhile under the unqualified and unprepared Federal Trade Commission."

Chairman Sam Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce Committee retorted that the bill was "conceived in a spirit of truest conservatism."

"It was conceived," declared Britten, "in the little red house in Georgetown, and is the fifth and probably the last bill for the regimentation of the country's industries that will come from the youthful intellectuals who have framed most of the 'planned legislation' during the present session of Congress.."

Britten Deplores Expense.

The Illinois Representative asserted the measure would make the Federal Trade Commission the most powerful and far-reaching arm of our Government, and would "cost the Nation hundreds of millions of dollars a year, for no purpose."

"The scarlet fever boys," said Britten, "have written into the Fletcher-Rayburn bill an unusual section which in itself is in the nature of an excuse or argument for doing the unconstitutional things which the bill itself is intended to circumvent.

"The popular demand for stock exchange regulation has given the Prof. Felix Frankfurter cheer leaders a vehicle to control all credit and corporate practices, such as not even Russia can boast of today. The boys in the little red house breathed easier when their

May 1 Strike Peril Gauged By Doumergue

French Premier Orders Army to Back Mobilization of Police.

Paris, April 29 (AP).—France's fighting little premier, Gaston Doumergue, whose famous smile hides a stern will, today boldly took up the challenge of a May Day general strike.

The former President ordered one of the biggest police mobilizations, backed by the army, since the World War to crush any movement leading to civil war. Rebellion, he has already warned, holds the danger of "foreign invasion."

Final plans to throw the tightest possible guard around Paris, with the mobilization of every available man, were drawn today at a conference held with public order officials by Albert Sarrault, minister of the interior.

Army garrisons in the capital, at Versailles and elsewhere will be held in readiness to support police if necessary.

In Paris alone there are 18,000 police, 10,000 mobile guards—the men who did much shooting and fighting in the February riots—and 3,000 mounted guards.

Ten thousand police will patrol the streets, while 250 police cars will be held at strategic places, ready to rush to threatened spots on the direction of a radio-equipped airplane, which will patrol the city.

This imposing display of force is counted upon to overawe Communists and crush by sheer force of numbers any disorders, much according to the scheme followed in recent Communist demonstrations, when heavy police cordons speedily broke up gatherings. They made 5,000 arrests, leaving the mobs leaderless and scattered.

Importance given the army as a reserve was indicated by today's session. In addition to civil authorities, Marshal Henri Petain, minister

Jersey City, N. J., April 29 (AP). The Rev. Julius Moscati, pastor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Roman Catholic Church, was shot and killed today in the hall of the church rectory when he stepped between his sister-in-law and the pistol of a Newark carpenter, whom police charge with the murder. The priest received a bullet through the heart.

The carpenter, Dominica Marra, 40, told detectives after the slaying, they said, he had no grievance against the pastor and was sorry he killed him. They asserted he said he had gone to the rectory to kill Mrs. Christina Moscati, the pastor's sister-in-law and her daughter, Louise, because of an unpaid debt.

Mrs. Moscati was wounded three times and was fleeing from Marra, police reported, when Father Moscati, returning from the last mass in his church, hurried into the hallway to investigate the shooting and stepped between his fleeing sister-in-law and the fatal bullet. Mrs. Moscati's daughter was not in the rectory when the shooting occurred.

Marra, taken to police headquarters, signed a confession. He was charged with murder and atrocious assault and battery, and held without bail for arraignment tomorrow.

Mrs. Moscati suffered bullet wounds in the left wrist and right shoulder and a third bullet grazed her forehead.

Father Moscati, who was 52 years old, had been pastor of the church for 21 years.

Durable Goods Group Sees Cost Passed on to Buying Public.

A. F. of L. Control Of Unions Fought

Strike Danger Feared in Wagner Bill; Hour Cut Opposed.

"Any further increase in wages at this time would retard and not encourage recovery," a committee of the Durable Goods Industries, employers of the bulk of American labor, reported yesterday to Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Appointed for the industry to study Gen. Johnson's "12 points" for industrial recovery, the committee declared its opinion that "no attempt should be made to effect blanket increases in wages or reduction in code hours by executive order."

Basing its data on reports from nearly 5,000 companies in 83 different industry groups—manfacturers, makers of steel, producers of lumber, &c., and claiming to be employers of half of America's working men, the committee advised Gen. Johnson that any increase in wages must be passed on to the buyer, and would hinder, not help, National recovery. Even the lowest paid workers today are receiving 10 per cent more compensation, measured in actual buying power, than a year ago, the report stated.

Company Unions Indorsed.

Company unions were indorsed in the heavy goods industries report and the Wagner bill was assailed as encouraging industrial strife.

"We urge that emphasis be placed upon and encouragement be given to plans of plant employer-employe contact," the committee said.

Regarding price fixing in connection with minimum wages, the first point submitted by Gen Johnson, the committee reported:

"We recognize that a minimum wage is a subject for consideration from the social rather than the economic point of view. We accept the principle of that, for the present emergency, it is necessary to maintain wages at a decent standard against the certain results of predatory and cutthroat competition.

"Whatever the merits of unrestricted competition may be under ordinary circumstances, experience has shown that some degree of price stabilization in many industries is necessary in an emergency such as the present, if wages are to be maintained at a decent level. The form which price stabilization should take depends, however, upon

50-Foot Plunge To River Fatal

Father of 4 Swept Into Potomac While on Fishing Trip.

Swirling waters of the upper Potomac River claimed their first drowning victim of the season yesterday, when George Wastler, 36, of the 1314 block of Fourteenth street northwest, plunged 50 feet from a high bluff near Chain Bridge, where he had been fishing.

A swift undertow carried Wastler into midstream before two companions, George Rosenberg, a brother-in-law, and Reid Parker, of 11 Kennedy street northeast, could come to his aid.

Rosenberg and Parker were fishing several yards up the river when they heard Wastler scream. Parker ripped off his clothing and dived into the water, but was unable to find the man's body. Searchers were still dragging the river at a late hour last night.

Wastler was the father of four children, Dorothy, 14; Bobby, 12; Mary, 6, and Connie, 2. He was an employe of the National Electric Supply Co.

Parker and Rosenberg were held by police for several hours, but were released after questioning. The trio had been fishing for several hours before Wastler fell, investigators were told.

Machado May Give Up If He Knows Charges

New York, April 29 (AP).—Dr. Orestes Ferrara, former Cuban secretary of state, announced today that Cuba's former President, Gerardo Machado, is prepared to surrender to Federal authorities for extradition, provided they grant him certain guarantees.

"President Machado feels keenly the humiliation of being hunted like a felon," Dr. Ferrara said, "yet he can not give himself up without the arrival of papers containing the charges against him. Should he do so, he could, under the extradition treaty, be held in jail for two months pending the arrival of these papers."

Crippled Spain Is Socialists' May Day Goal

150,000 Catalonians Fight Fascism as Class War Impends.

Madrid, April 30 (AP).—Socialists and Extremists today announced plans for a crippling May Day general strike, while at Barcelona 150,000 Catalonians engaged in a five-hour series of street demonstrations against Fascism and the Agrarian party.

Preparations for precautions against May Day celebrations were begun by the government. A state of alarm now in effect halted plans for large Socialist public meetings.

However, a Socialist newspaper told party members: "We are determined to obtain power at any cost. A class battle looms on the horizon."

Despite a misty rain at Barcelona, multitudes flocked through the streets protesting against "any danger threatening our freedom."

A gigantic parade of more than 100,000 persons, including about 40,000 "Rebaissairies," or truck farmers, wound through the principal streets bearing Catalonian banners, and shouting "Down with Fascism" and "Down with Gilrobes" (leader of the Agrarian party).

A group of Communisits carrying red flags joined the procession, but police ousted them after a brief clash in which two persons were hurt and three arrested.

Speakers described Catalonia as a "bulwark against Fascism" and said 75,000 farmers would rise "as one man" against dictatorship. Demonstrators came to Barcelona by special train, fleets of buses and automobiles from all sections of the State.

Socialist and Syndicalist organizations called upon workers in hotels, boarding houses, cafes, bars theaters, foodstores and similar places of business to strike at midnight Monday.

Newspapers will not publish from this morning until Tuesday night.

Authorities planned heavy patrols in public centers and workers' districts to prevent disorders. The mayor's office in Madrid issued a proclamation reinforcing medical emergency services in central districts and thes uburbs.

Woodward & Lothrop Club Installs Officers

George H. Post, past master of La Fayette Lodge No. 19, F.A.A.M., and Dudley LeRoy Herndon were installed as president and vice president, respectively, of the Builders Club at a banquet in the Arlington Hotel Saturday night. The club is composed of master Masons who are employed at the Woodward and Lothrop department store.

The Rev. John C. Palmer, pastor of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church and Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge, F.A.A.M., of the District of Columbia, spoke. The banquet was arranged by Horace L. Richardson, retiring president; John Adams, E. M. Arthur and C. F. Gray.

M'Cormack Asks Law to Help Deportation of Alien Criminals

A more effective law for the deportation of alien criminals was demanded of Congress yesterday by Col. Daniel W. MacCormack, Commissioner of Immigration.

Insisting "no quarter" be shown the aliens now escaping deportation, Col. MacCormack indorsed five bills now before the Senate and House.

Most important of the measures, he declared, is a bill introduced by Representative Crowe (Democrat), of Indiana, which would provide that an alien convicted of two or more crimes might be deported.

"Investigation has revealed that present laws are far from effective in carrying out the deportation of alien criminals," the commissioner said, "but that, on the other hand, the rigidity of existing statutes not infrequently causes extreme hardship and outright injustice to desirable aliens illegally in this country and to their dependents who are, in the majority of instances, American citizens.

"Weakness of existing statutes in effecting the deportation of criminal aliens was brought to light in a check of criminal records in New York and Chicago, where the study disclosed 235 criminal aliens who are not deportable under our present laws.

"The Crowe bill would give the authorities a powerful weapon against many racketeers now immune from deportation.

"Under present laws, an alien may have as many as 25 convictions and yet not be subject to deportation."

cused of disposing of ransom monies, stolen bonds, securities and specie to an estimated total of $50,000,000.

Authorities, pursuing the Bremer clews, recalled the deaths of Edgar Lebensberger, proprietor of a swanky night club; of Gus Winkler, dapper gangster, and two others. Lebensberger was found shot to death in his near North Side apartment, apparently a suicide, on the same day he was named in secret indictments along with several others charging possesion of part of the $250,000 taken in a loop mail robbery.

Lebensberger reputedly had "talked" concerning the same "hot money" ring authorities are reputedly tracking down in the Bremer case. A few days after Lebensberger's death, Winkler was ambushed and slain. He also "talked" with the Federal men.

Indicted in the mail robbery was John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, once a Chicago political poweri. Two men who might have been witnesses against him were slain mysteriously. And now McLaughlin is one of the five held in connection with the $200,000 Bremer paid after his abduction January 17.

The arrest of McLaughlin, authorities asserted, likely would lead to uncovering of brokers who aided the underworld in disposal of ransom money and stolen securities, much of it for as little as 40 cents on the dollar.

President Poses For Silhouette

Woman Artist Uses Blue Eagle Paper, Shears.

President Roosevelt has presented Mrs. Roosevelt a silhouette of himself, cut out in NRA eagle blue paper by Gene Ross. The silhouette bears the autograph of the President and the artist.

Mrs. Ross is writing a book, "Around the World With a Pair of Scissors," and is earning her traveling expenses with her silhouettes. She recently completed an entire book of silhouettes of NRA executives for Mrs. Mary Rumsey, chairman of the consumers council of the NRA.

Spain and Vatican To Seek Concordat On Jesuit Property

Madrid, April 29 (AP).—Pita Romero, former minister of state in the cabinet of Premier Alejandro Lerroux, will proceed to Rome within a few days to begin negotiations for a Spanish concordat with the Vatican, it was learned today from official sources.

It was stated that any accord reached would be merely a modus vivendi and that Article 26 of the Spanish constitution, separating the church and the state and placing religious orders under civic control, would not be revised.

One of the principal points of a preliminary pact with the Vatican, according to high church and state officials, would be an agreement regarding the Jesuit properties in Spain. Properties valued at some $90,000,000 were confiscated, and it is reported that more than $100,000,000 of additional properties are in litigation.

Gang Victim Stabbed; 24 Seized in Probe

Twenty-four men were held for questioning by police yesterday following an early morning gang fight in which Frank Ferguson, colored, 33, was stabbed in the back.

Ferguson told police he was walking near his home in the 900 block of Four-and-One-Half street southwest when he was attacked and beaten by the gang. He suffered a punctured lung from a knife thrust in the back.

Wallace Won By the Ladies In Cheesecloth

the figures. The criticism, however, was eclipsed by his admiration for the work as a whole, Wallace added.

Prof. Tugwell has expressed an opposite view. He has said the painting is too allegorical, too classical. Disregarding the Greek architecture of the Agriculture Building, he has intimated a preference for the current century, a sort of hankering for a recognizable farm scene.

Interviewed afterward at the Mayflower Hotel, a flushed and happy Mr. White said he believed his picture would speak for itself.

"When the people of America see it, they will understand that I have tried to portray the basic things of life," he said. "They will see that I have sought the things that will persist always, north, south, east and west."

Debate on Security Bill Starts Today

child was finally deposited in the Congressional hopper by Chairman Rayburn.

"I am told that Telford Taylor, a young and recent graduate from Harvard, was the father of the first Fletcher-Rayburn bill.

Pecora Among Framers.

"But it was soon kidnaped by Landis (FTC) and Frankfurter (HU), who immediately proceeded, with the advice of Pecora, Tommy Corcoran (RFC) and Benjamin Cohen (PWA), to put the finishing touches on what was intended to be the second child.

"Too much vodka and too little cream made it too hot for even the red letter boys and it was again rewritten, only to be drowned in a sea of publicity.

"If the present unhappy child should be adopted by Congress, the Federal Trade Commission could restrict the operation of almost every industry in the United States and could regulate it out of existence by the control of credit and other restrictions, without having to give its reasons for doing so.

Worse Than Soviet.

"Lenin and Trotzky never envisioned such far-reaching possibilities for strangulation."

In reporting the Fletcher-Rayburn bill last Friday, the Interstate Commerce Committee called for diversion of credit from speculative to legitimate industry. The minority statement, filed by Representative Merritt (Republican), Connecticut, warned that there is "very wide fear of depreciation from the enactment of this bill."

The measure may be taken up by the Senate this week.

Oregon Pilgrimage To Be Honored Here

An Oregon Products dinner will be given by the Oregon State Society of Washington at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel at 7 p. m. Saturday.

The affair is in honor of the members of the Jason-Lee Pilgrimage party, who will stop here en route from Boston to Salem, Oreg., over the trail followed a century ago by Oregon's first settlers.

Four Lost Children Found.

Four lost children were picked up by police yesterday afternoon at Twelfth and I streets southeast. Howard Wood, 9; Ruth and Maria, twins, 6, and Phillip, 3, said their father came from Jackson, Mich., two days ago to work in the Navy Yard. During the absence of their mother at church, according to police, the tots strayed from home.

So He Takes a Slower One and Forgets Baggage on Honeymoon.

"This is no experiment, it just happened," said the scientist of his marriage to the beautiful 20-year-old Austrian, Gertrude Swetz, before departing for his Villa Voronoff, on the Ligurian coast, to spend his honeymoon.

Voronoff and his tall, dark-eyed, brown-haired bride arose early, prepared to catch a Pullman express to Genoa. The scientist agreed to talk while en route to the train, announcing, "I am going back to my work, taking my bride."

"Private Life My Own."

A "laboratory of youth" at the villa has been the scene of many of Dr. Voronoff's experiments in rejuvenation.

"My work belongs to the world, but my marriage and private life to myself," he said. At this point it was revealed that the bride's mother is journeying with the couple to visit Villa Voronoff.

Dr. Voronoff said he had been traveling extensively recently gathering notes on longevity of various peoples. He was particularly intrigued, he explained, by the report that life of one tribe extended to 140 years, but said he considered this extraordinary, believing the greatest life span could hardly surpass 120 years.

Marriage no Experiment.

By this time the bridal group had reached the station platform.

"Oh, hurry, hurry, cheri," fretted the bride. "The train is leaving."

"Never mind, cherie, there are other trains," replied Dr. Voronoff as he passed an arm around his wife in a soothing gesture.

Safely ensconced on a slower train, Dr. Voronoff replied to the question of whether his marriage was in any way connected with his scientific life by saying:

"Run along now. This is no experiment. It just happened."

When the train was in motion the scientist suddenly remembered the baggage and implored the correspondent to forward it.

The whole assortment of 14 pieces had been left in the hotel because checking had been neglected.

10,000 to See Colors Massed

Marine Band Will Play at Cathedral Services May 27.

More than 10,000 persons are expected for the seventh annual massing of colors service in the amphitheater of Washington Cathedral on Mount St. Alban Sunday, May 27, at 4 p. m., Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., adjutant general of the Military Order of the World War, and Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, representing Bishop James E. Freeman, announced yesterday.

The gathering is sponsored by the Military Order of the World War.

Music will be furnished by the Marine Band, and the procession of colors, including the standards of all organizations, will take place in the amphitheater.

Among those who will take part are Bishop Freeman, Capt. Arlington A. McCallum, chaplain general of the Military Order of the World War; Col. Alva J. Brasted, chief of chaplains of the Army, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, U. S. N.

Y.M.C.A. Camp Roll To Open This Week

Onions, peppers, potatoes and tomatoes have been planted by 80 boy gardeners officially opening the Civitan Club's garden program on the south side of Benning road, adjacent to the Eastern Branch.

With soil prepared and gardens laid out in 56 foot by 30 foot plots, youngsters from 8 to 16 years old have started operation under W. R. Beattie, senior horticulturist of the Department of Agriculture. Responsibility for planting and working the gardens rests with the boys, and crops grown become individual property. The 10 outstanding gardeners will be sent to Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. camp on the Rhodes River, for a week's vacation.

The gardens are financed by the Civitan Club and maintained on land loaned by the Government.

Some Fun

Pair Play Swapping Blows With Iron Pipe.

It was a two-handed game of "give and take"—but one player just couldn't take it.

Cleanzy Rich, 24, and Dennis Baker, 44, both colored, were recovering from injuries last night. Their hurts were described as follows by the Police teletype system:

"Both men took turns in striking each other on the head with an iron pipe."

At Gallinger Hospital physicians said Baker was the one who "couldn't take it." He was admitted for treatment of severe lacerations, while Rich was taken to the Fourth Precinct Station and held pending outcome of his opponent's injuries.

'Good Samaritan' Robbed, He Says

Pair Hails Motorist, Then Takes Cash, Is Report.

Playing the "good Samaritan" cost Hubert White, of the 2200 block of G street northwest, his wallet and $8 early yesterday.

White told police he was driving his automobile near Seventeenth and De Sales streets northwest, when two men stepped from the curb and hailed his machine. Believing they were in trouble, he stopped.

One of the men approached the driver's window, while the second remained in front of the machine, White reported. The first man, he said, drew a revolver.

The gunman ordered White to "stick 'em up," reached through the window and took his pocketbook. Both men fled on foot, White told police. They were young and well dressed, he added.

Convicts Steal Boat in Flight

Nowell and Comrade Seen Several Times, But Elude Pursuit.

Chester, Ill., April 29 (AP).—Hard-pressed by possemen, Randol Eugene Norvell, escaped life-term kidnaper, and a fellow fugitive, James O'Connell, still were at large in the hills south of here late today, after stealing a motorboat to recross the Mississippi River from Missouri to Illinois.

Still wearing the prison garb in which they wormed their way to freedom through a 14-inch sewer at the southern Illinois Penitentiary Friday, the fugitives were sighted several times today as approximately 200 possemen carried on their relentless search.

A fisherman saw the fugitives as they moored the craft near Gorham, Ill., and chased them, but the felons soon outdistanced him.

Hours later a farmer sighted the pair walking along a road near Gorham and notified prison officials. The men then fled into the hills back of Gorman and bloodhounds were brought here from Murphysboro.

Christ Child Society Gathers Tomorrow

Delegates from numerous cities will attend the annual National and local meeting of the Christ Child Society tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Raleigh Hotel.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, will be the guest of honor. Previous to the meeting there will be an exhibit of the work of the Washington Relief Settlement at 7 p. m. This will embrace the various arts and crafts taught at the settlement, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Building Jobs Declared Hit By U. S. Policy

"Abuses" Scored by Head of Architects' Institute as Recovery Blow.

"Governmental abuses," which, he declared, "destroyed the integrity and morale of the construction industry" and retard its recovery, were assailed yesterday by Ernest J. Russell, president of the American Institute of Architects, in a letter to George H. Houston, chairman of the durable goods industries committee.

"Conditions in the construction industry are deplorable," he said. "At this moment, both employers and employes are in the ranks of the unemployed. Private building construction in 1934 is about 80 per cent prostrated.

"The groups normally engaged in building construction are now dependent for existence to a large extent upon projects financed with public money; but that dependence, so far as the architects are concerned, has proved to be utterly insufficient.

"The treatmen of the employers of this industry in Federal and State policies, except in the Treasury Department, is destructive of the integrity and morale of the entire construction industry and is inconsistent with policies of fair play urged by the Administration, and retards to a marked degree their recovery.

"The whole tendency of Federal bureaus, State, bureaus and other agencies engaged in spending public money for building construction is either to ignore these employers or to reduce the compensation paid for their services to an existence basis.

"The procurement division of the Treasury Department, which is engaged in the erection of postoffice buildings throughout the country, has announced that on all projects costing more than $60,000 private architects will be engaged. It has also stipulated that adequate engineering services must be provided in every case.

"If the other departments of the Federal Government and the States, engaged directly or indirectly in spending public money on public building works would follow this example, there would be a great improvement in the morale and in the living conditions of the architectural and engineering professions."

Meeting Is Set For Synagogue

Jewish Bodies Convene Here May 6; Symposium Is Planned.

Preparations are being made by members of Washington synagogues for the opening here, May 6, of the United Synagogue of America, which will hold its sessions at the Willard Hotel.

A feature of the convention will be a symposium on religious prejudice, from which is expected to develop a definite policy.

Joseph A. Wilner, president of the Sixth Street Synagogue, is chairman of the Washington convention committee, which includes Mrs. Morris Gewirz, Leo Schlossberg, Max Ostrtow, Bernard Danzansky, Mrs. George W. Levy, Mrs. M. A. Salomon, Mrs. Jack Veax, Mrs. Charles Stein, Mrs. eYtta Becker, Mrs. M. Friedenberg, Mrs. M. Bisger, Mrs. H. Hertzberg, Mrs. William Bralove and Mrs. Rose Weiss.

Drink-Crazed Man Shoots Down Two

James was hit on the arm and ankle.

Police, however, believe that robbery was not the motive for shooting Styles and Johnson. They are seeking a suspect known to have been drinking and brandishing a revolver on the street several blocks from where the men were shot.

Several Men Jailed.

Styles, a teller at the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, Ninth and G streets northwest, is the father of two small children, Dorothy, 6, and Newell T. Styles, jr., 2. He lives with his family in the 1400 block of Military road northwest.

Several colored men, meanwhile, are being held for questioning at the Second Police Precinct. One of them is an escaped inmate of the Lorton Reformatory.

Edward Adams, of the 1500 block of Corcoran street northwest, was among more than a score of weekend robbery victims. He was robbed of $3 while standing near Sixteenth and K streets northwest.

Other robberies were reported by Harry G. Albrecht, 700 block of Twenty-second street northwest; Benjamin Kruger, 2000 block of Eighteenth street northwest; Julius Monset, 2300 block of Seventeenth street northwest, and Hyman Gamerman, 400 block of O street northwest.

All are merchants, and reported a combined loss of $150.

Industries Hit Blanket Wage Rise as Peril

Tell Johnson Cost Would Be Laid on Buying Public.

Uniform Rules Opposed.

"No uniform rules can be prescribed that would be effective for all. The most generally recognized method of preventing socially undesirable price cutting is to prohibit sales below costs. This is not, under all circumstances, a complete or appropriate remedy, as is recognized by the existence of other plans for price stabilization.

"The use of any pricing method should be permitted when desired by an industry and where it results in any form of price stabilization or control when sanctioned by the administrator."

Regarding wage increases, the committee said:

"It is the committee's firm belief that in the durable goods industries, where purchases can be postponed indefinitely, further increases in costs and resultant increased selling prices would tend to reduce the volume of sales and employment.

Individual Cases Cited.

"On the other hand, the committee recognizes that there are individual cases where adjustments have not been made in keeping with adjustments generally, and where specific conditions make wage increases and reduction in maximum hours possible.

"The committee recommends in such cases that such changes be made. In the opinion of the committee, no attempt should be made to effect blanket increases in wages or reduction in code hours by executive order."

Satisfactory employer-employe relations can be worked out on the following platform, says the report:

"A wage scale which compensates the worker fairly and generously within the ability of the employer to pay.

"Establishment of safe and sanitary working conditions.

"Confidence as it is affected by other factors—better homes, better educational facilities and all that goes to make up a healthful and happy community life."

A. F. of L. Opposed.

Company unions are favored in the belief "the result will be peace and cooperation through confidence built upon a foundation of understanding."

Settlement of disputes should take place at the point of origin, the report says, opposing the American Federation of Labor.

"Every encouragement should be given," says the report, "to the establishment of procedure which provides for the settlement of disputes in a plant by the employes and management of the plant, since it is axiomatic that labor disputes should be settled at their point of origin.

"It is our recommendation that each code authority be encouraged to set up a plan providing for the amicable settlement of disputes arising within the industry which have not been settled within the individual plant.

"It is our firm conviction that all subsequent procedure in connection with the handling of disputes should be kept within the jurisdiction of the NRA.

"The entire recovery program contemplates the cooperation of industry under codes with the NRA. Real cooperation can only be secured when confidence has been established through understanding.

"Such machinery for handling disputes as the present National Labor Board or the proposed board of the pending Wagner labor disputes act encourages disputes and prevents the proper handling of employe and employer relationships, by driving a wedge between codified industries and NRA."

Rock Creek Group To Present Plays

Three short plays and an operetta will be given by the Rock Creek Players in the parish auditorium of Rock Creek Episcopal Church Friday at 8:15 p. m.

The first play is "The Grand Cham's Diamond," by Allan Monkhouse. It will be directed by Florence W. Armstrong, and its cast includes Florence Jackson, Burton Parsons, Edith Priddy, Douglas Pickens and Berry Simpson.

"The Set of Books," the second presentation, will be directed by its author, J. Fred Parsons, a member of the vestry of Rock Creek Church. Its cast includes Mildred Wilson, Elizabeth Jordan and Albert Armstrong. Frederick Pratt and Harry Richards compose the cast of the third play, "Reincarnation," by Mary McGowan.

Church Play Tourney To Begin Wednesday

The One-act Play Tournament of Religious Drama, sponsored by the religious drama committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, will be held at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P streets northwest, beginning Wednesday at 8 p. m.

It is planned to present three short plays that evening and three additional dramas Friday. The third program will take place May 8, with the finals scheduled for May 11. The production committee includes Lewis Barrington, chairman; E. L. Ford, Mrs. R. L. Sanford, Dr. Frederick V. Rand, Miss Helen Burton and Hugh S. Smith.

arrangements and left with the likelihood of permanently losing most of the foreign trade which otherwise it might have had.

"That is not a pleasant situation for any American to look upon and least of all at such a time as this when it may have the effect of shaping our whole future domestic National policy as well as losing our foreign trade," Stimson said.

"I should not like to see my country driven to an attempt to live within its own borders without any foreign trade whatever, involving system of bureaucratic planning at which our whole instincts and traditions revolt; involving a shifting of great masses of our people from their present occupations into other homes and other businesses; involving the discontinuance or operation on a lower scale of many of our great industries; and all just because we can not organize our Government in an effective way to meet the great emergency," he told his hearers.

Planned Economy Scouted.

"I have never been able to conjure up any real apprehension that the American people would be willing to carry through anything like a complete system of planned national economy. It would be at variance with their deepest instincts and habits . . . They would refuse a planned economy, not because it was economy, but because it was planned by others than themselves. They would reject a doctrine of National self-sufficiency, not because it was National, but because it was insufficient for their spirit of adventure . . .

"Put such a population in charge of area like the United States with its matchless natural resources . . . and its unique geographical situation commanding the trade routes of two great oceans, and I believe a development of commercial relations with the outside world will follow as naturally as sunrise follows night," Stimson said.

Terming the present chaotic conditions of world trade the outcome of the war, Stimson declared in conclusion the growing Nationalism in trade can be coped with affectively by only the use of the same weapons employed by the others—executive making powers as provided for in the bill now before Congress.

10 Unhurt as Autos Collide, Overturn

Ten persons escaped injury when two automobiles overturned on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near College Park yesterday morning.

The machines were traveling towards Baltimore when the collision occurred. Six persons from Baltimore occupied one of the cars, while four colored people from Lakeland, Md., were in the other.

Added Prince Georges Bus Lines to Be Asked

P. J. Newmaker, chairman of the transportation committee of the Bladensburg (Md.) Junior High School Paren-Teacher Association, has announced his committee will visit the Prince Georges County Board of Education May 8 to ask for added bus service for school pupils.

Service is needed for children attending the school and living in Lanham, Edmonston, Colmar Manor and Cottage City, he said. Only popils from Landover now have transportation.

Receipts Show 68% Increase In Internal Tax

Collection Costs Are Cut to $1.084 Per $100, Says Treasury Report.

Internal revenue collections for the first nine months of the fiscal year 1934 were more than 68 per cent higher than collectins for the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1933, but operating costs of the Bureau of Internal Revenue were lower this year than last, the Treasury Department revealed yesterday.

Total collections of internal revenue from July 1, 1933, to March 31, 1934, including processing taxes, were $1,962,339,156. Excluding processing taxes, collections were $1,709,248,073. For the same nine months of the previous fiscal year, total collections were $1,164,421,906.

The gain in revenue, including processing taxes, was $797,917,250.

The cost of operating the bureau, under Guy T. Helvering, was reduced to $19,790,555, a decrease of $3,262,108, as compared to last year.

It now costs the Government $1.084 to colect each $100 of internal revenue.

of war, and Gens. Pretelat and Laure, attended it.

Seven hundred police stations in Paris will be kept ready for a riot call, while police will be subject to constant action.

In addition to deciding upon an overwhelming display of force, doumergue is determined to throw a psychological and industrial challenge at the Communists.

Instead of accepting a crippling of the public services of the nation as an inevitable part of the May Day demonstration, the premier has decided to attempt to maintain the country's life on a normal basis. He has asked banks and business houses to operate as usual to force Communist employed in them to show hands and run the danger of disciplinary action.

Many big plants, however, such as the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., will close as a matter of insurance to guard against sabotage, since they have many Communist workers.

Ten Arrested in Brussels.

Brussels, April 29 (AP).—Police here and at Malines today arrested nine foreign Communists and one Belgian on charges of preparing revolutionary agitation for May Day.

Firearms and propaganda were seized at Malines. Other Communist headquarters in industrial centers were to be raided.

Vessels Rush to Help Distressed Greek Ship

New York, April 29 (AP).—The Patris II, a Greek steamer plying the Mediterranean, was reported in distress tonight in the vicinity of Naples by a message from the steamer Exochodra to MacKay Radio.

The vessel's engines had broken down, the message said, and the Excalibur and other ships were offering aid.

Rubber Production Cut In Asia Is Agreed Upon

London, April 29 (AP).—An agreement to restrict and regulate rubber productions in the Asiatic tropics was announced today by the Rubber Growers Association. It affects colonies owned by Great Britain, Holland and France.

With conclusion of negotiations, the association announced the agreement would be submitted to the respective governments with the request that legislative effect be given to its provisions.

Brookwood Players Booked.

Sponsored by the Socialist party, the Brookwood Players will make their second appearance at 709 G street northwest, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The players are sent from Brookwood Labor College each year. The entertainment will consist of three one-act plays, songs, recitations and skits.

Stocks Battle Difficulties in Week's Dealing

Silver, Commodities Get Blame for Heaviness in Shares.

New York, April 29 (AP).—Stocks fluctuated between hesitancy and heaviness this week, finding the speculative outlook a bit beclouded by an abrupt slump in the silver market, further pressure against grains and cotton, the presence of labor difficulties ahd some spottiness in trade.

Compensating influences included optimistic reports on steel industry prospects, encouraging earnings figures, and the railway wage settlement; the last strengthened hope that other industrial conflicts could be adjusted amicably.

Also, those who oppose inflationary measures of one sort or other professed encouragement at the resistance which the White House has offered to various proposals that do not appeal to the more conservative financial circles.

Strengthening of Confidence.

A strengthening of confidence, it was pointed out, might well mean a more aggressive expansion of trade; hence the Washington stage is being watched closely.

Leading steel companies made their reports on first-quarter operations. Losses after charges were the rule, save for Inland Steel, but Wall street was more interested in the emphatic improvement of the production ratio and the confidence of executives that the second quarter would be profitable.

Output is expected soon to surpass last year's high. What extent inventory-stocking will have on mill activity later in the year remains to be seen; much would appear to depend on business conditions at that time.

Dimming of Inflation.

The dimming of inflationary factors has been most strikingly mirrored in the commodity markets.

So far stocks have borne up reasonably well under this adverse influence, probably because of generally favorable trade statistics; in the past, both business and securities have been hurt by prolonged weakness of staples and the latter's resistance is regarded as a matter of importance.

Foreign exchanges stopped their recent run against the dollar which had momentarily put rates at a point that would have made gold exports from this country profitable. The Treasury stated that licenses to ship gold would be granted on request and speculators ceased to be interested.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Wall Street Business Analysts Believe Peak of Spring Rally Has Been Reached; Opinions Differ as to Probable Recession.

By Ralph West Robey.

Among business analysts in the New York financial district the view now is fairly general that we have reached the peak of the spring rally. It is expected that some of the business indices, notably steel production, will continue upward for another week or so, but these, it is said, will be offset by other factors, with the result that on balance there will be little if any further gain. As these students see the question, thus, it now is largely only a matter of how much the recession will be from here on.

That this should be viewed as the main problem in the outlook is, in itself, of some importance. Only two or three weeks ago there was the widest kind of variation among the analysts as to what the future had in store. At that time some were maintaining that there were no signs of a recession after the usual seasonal peak, but rather that improvement would continue right on through the summer, while others were insisting that storm clouds were gathering and it was only a matter of time until business activity experienced a sharp downturn.

Business Reports Were Unusually Confusing.

The reason for this diversity of opinion was the extraordinarily large amount of conflict in the business data at the time. On the one side were numerous first-hand reports that looked bad; on the other side an impressive list of important business indices that continued to reflect improvement —steel production, automobile production and sales, car loadings, electric power consumption, bank debits, &c. Any one who attempted to formulate an opinion about the future, accordingly, was faced with an exceedingly difficult task. The result was that the financial district was filled with conflicting views.

Now, it appears, practically all of this has disappeared. This does not mean, of course, that there is unanimity, for that is never the case. What it does mean is that at present the difference of opinion cluster around one side of the question—the possible decline from now on. Among those to whom I have talked I have found opinions that varied from the view that the present level of business activity will be maintained to the belief that there will be a recession of from 15 to 20 per cent during the next few months.

Pessimists Do Not Expect Immediate Federal Action.

Those who take the more pessimistic view, that the recession will be substantial, do not expect the Government to perfect any means in the immediate future that will be effective as a further stimulant to business activity. They recognize that the Government has not exhausted its possibilities along these lines, but for one reason or another they think any further action will be delayed, the Administration relying in the meantime upon credit expansion plans, such as the home renovation campaign. These, it is held by this group, will not be sufficient to prevent a business decline.

Those who think that the volume of business activity will remain fairly steady at the current level fall into two groups. On the one side are those who believe that the Administration will not permit a recession, but will step in as soon as the indices turn unfavorable. On the other side are those who base their conclusion upon what may be termed negative action by the Government—modification of the securities act, passage of a stock exchange bill that will not be deflationary, failure to pass any of the disturbing legislation now before Congress such as the Wagner bill, and refusal to indulge in further currency experiments.

It is to be hoped, it seems to me, that this negative-action group proves to be correct. At the moment, however, I am afraid that the first group, the pessimists, have a little the better of the argument.

Curb's Trend Drifts Lower; Sales Down

Apathetic Trading Marks Week's Sessions; Metals Firm at Times.

New York, April 29 (AP).—The trend of curb stocks was a little lower last week. Trading was apathetic most of the time and selling generally of a desultory nature.

Volume dwindled and transfers for each full session averaged only around 225,000 shares compared to around 300,000 for the week previous. A few active flurries occurred but they were brief.

Recent favorites in the miscellaneous list failed to provide much interest. Metals were active, and rather firm at times. Oils, utilities and alcohols did little.

A few preferred utility shares were a bit firmer, including the senior issues of Cities Service and Electric Bond & Share. Ford of Canada B improved in a light turnover. Dow Chemical moved up on declaration of a 50 per cent stock dividend. Other firm spots included Lake Shore Mines, Hollinger Gold, Kreuger Brewing and United States Foil B.

Tubize Chatillon and Industrial Rayon (new) were soggy due to price unsettlement in the yarn industry. Scattered selling occurred in Charis Corporation, Aluminum Co. of America, Newmont, Schiff Co. Greyhound Corporation (new), Sherwin Williams and Swift International, Electric Bond & Share common, Hiram Walker, Standard Oil of Indiana and Swift & Co. recorded slight changes.

Trade Reaches Highest Point For Season

General Business Activity Gives Evidences of Recession.

New York, April 29.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"In the past week, general business activity has given initial evidences of a moderate seasonal recession, except in those lines where demand has been sustained in part by abnormal factors. This appears to be particularly the case with the steel industry, in which activity has now risen to a point not far below the 59 per cent of capacity which marked the climax of last July.

The trade is expecting still further near term increases, but it is probable that a considerable part of this activity represents inventory stocking against higher prices for third quarter business.

"Automobile production appears to have reached a well-marked turning point between April 10 and 17, and the outlook is now for a gradual recession into the summer. Approval of the revised oil refining agreement and the copper code brings two major industries under the influence of planned control.

"Despite the evidence now available that the spring business peak has been reached, increasing indications that radical inflationary measures will be forestalled should have beneficial effects on business sentiment and the promotion of private projects now held in abeyance. These developments should tend to minimize the usual downward seasonal tendency over the next few months. Confidence n the general outlook is not likely to be disturbed by a movement of such proportions."

Culbertson on Bridge

Assuming Distribution.

Many a contract at the Bridge table is defeated because the Declarer assumes, with or without reason, that the distribution of the adversely held cards in a suit will follow normal lines—that is, that if there are four cards outstanding, they will break 2-2, or if there are five cards, they will break 3-2—and some players are so trusting that even when their own or the Dummy hand gives clear evidence of unusual distribution, they still expect their opponents' cards to be evenly divided.

West	North	East	South
Pass	1♣	1♡(1)	1♠
Pass	4♠(2)	5♡(3)	6♠(4)
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass

West, Dealer
North and South vulnerable

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

1—East, not vulnerable, should have made a Jump Overcall. A contract of four hearts would have been defeated only two tricks, and North and South, vulnerable, might have had difficulty in getting together at any higher contract.

2—A rather strong bid, but North's distribution is very favorable.

3—Had East bid four hearts on the first round, the attempted sacrifice might not have been necessary.

4—This Slam bid is taking a great deal for granted.

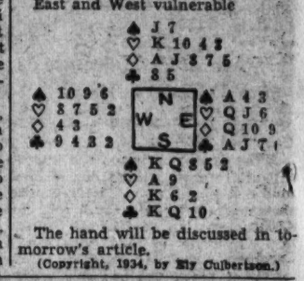
5—With North's unusual distribution, a Redouble would probably have been warranted.

West's Opening lead was the heart 9, and the King in Dummy held. The Declarer then led two rounds of trumps, and the diamond in Dummy was discarded on the Ace of hearts. The Declarer had had all the luck up to this point, having secured a favorable lead and an even break of the adverse trumps. He now played the Ten of clubs, and when West did not cover, assumed that East had at least one club. If that were the case, the contract with an overtrick was a certainty.

Proceeding on this assumption, South played the Ace of clubs from Dummy, and when East failed to follow, the contract could not be made, as South had to lose two diamond tricks. Had East held one club, South, of course, would have made an overtrick worth 200 points. However, the Dummy's distribution and the fact that East had been bidding very strongly, without the top honors in hearts suggested the strong probability of a freak. Nothing could defeat the contract of six, so the club Ten should have been finessed as an additional assurance of the safety of the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

East, Dealer
East and West vulnerable



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

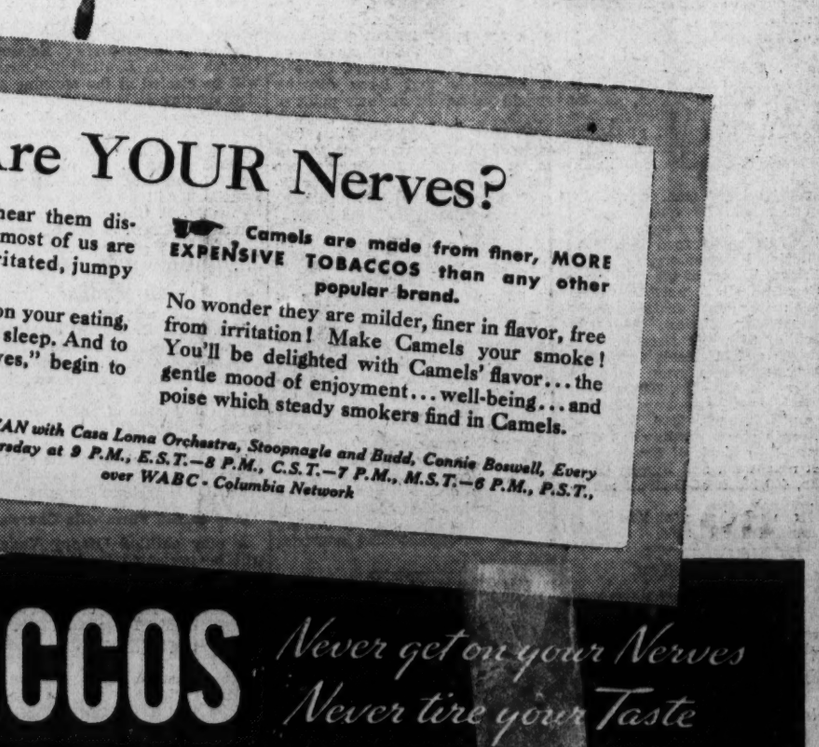
"—I NEED HEALTHY NERVES, TOO, MR. CECIL SMITH, WITH A THRIVING FAMILY TO LOOK OUT FOR"

Robert E. Butterfield, Jr., who has two thriving youngsters, says:

"A father's job gives a fellow plenty of experience with nerve strain, too! Providing for the children keeps you keyed up to concert pitch. Then—coming home from work, with Dick insisting on movies—Bob's eternal tap dancing—that's the zero hour for a father's nerves! Although I smoke all I want, jangled nerves have passed me by. That's because I smoke Camels. Camels have the fine flavor of the choicest, most expensive tobaccos. And I find they never upset my nerves."

Cecil Smith, who rose to the top of the polo world this year with a ten-goal rating, says:

"Polo makes continuous demands on your nervous system. A fraction of a second determines whether or not you can successfully ride your opponent out of a play and a fraction of an inch in your aim may mean a goal—made or missed! Most polo players, myself included, smoke a great deal. And most polo players, myself included again, prefer to smoke Camels. They are milder. I like their flavor and they never upset my nerves."



How Are YOUR Nerves?

Nerves, nerves, nerves! You hear them discussed everywhere today. For most of us are more or less the victims of irritated, jumpy nerves.

If troubled that way, check up on your eating, your work, your recreation, your sleep. And to be on the safe side about "nerves," begin to smoke Camels.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand.

No wonder they are milder, finer in flavor, free from irritation! Make Camels your smoke! You'll be delighted with Camels' flavor... the gentle mood of enjoyment... well-being... and poise which steady smokers find in Camels.

Radio Waves and Ripples

ENGLAND, Sweden, Russia and Czechoslovakia come to this country via the networks this week.

Fifteen minutes before Columbia plugs in Ramsay MacDonald and Ambassador Bingham speaking before the Royal Institute for International Affairs in London's famous Chatham House at 2:30 p. m. today, National will pick up Metropolitan Opera Soprano Lotte Lehmann singing in a production of "Fidelio" in the English capital's Covent Garden.

Also today, N. B. C. will send over part of the spring festival of folk music from Uppsala University in Sweden and tomorrow a chorus of 4,000 voices singing Dvorak's "Heirs of White Mountain" in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Prince George of England becomes the next international broadcaster when he addresses a London dinner honoring his recet return from South Africa. Examples of Swedish folk music to be broadcast from Stockholm by N. B. C. Friday finishes the international schedule.

Most observers of Poodlecatstown politics were wronged, as political observers are almost everywhere else, by results of the first day's voting in the Dandee Poodlescatstown election, a matter of deepest concern to the boys and girls to whom WRC's Dorothy Stewart is Aunt Sue.

To begin with, Muly Wuly, whose drive on town villains was expected to give him a decided edge in the balloting, was running a poor fifth with a total of 23, just two votes behind Cinnamon Bear, whose record as president of the club during the last year also made him a favorite with the experts.

The race for the presidency was conceded to lie between Pet, the monkey, and Brown Doggie, with a vote of 42 and 41, respectively. Pink Eye was next with 36. Other results were Duck Foot de Luby, 17; Chickiemicraneycrow, 13; Chipper, 12; Jackie Rabbit, 10; Black Doggie, 9; Green Eye, 9; White Doggie, 8; Catnipper, 7; Curly Cue, 1, and Sammy Starling, 1.

The vote for Sammy Starling was almost as surprising as Muley Wuly's upset, considering Sammy's local reputation.

THINGS in the advertising department of the Hygrade Sylvania Corporation have just about reached a crisis, judging from what we have heard about their lamp advertising manager from the company's public relations bureau.

"We have long pondered over the question of a suitable term for our products," Mr. Poor is supposed to have told the public relations bureau one morning. "We incline toward the term 'lamp bulbs,' which seems explicit, although requiring two words. Sometimes we add 'electric' to 'lamp bulbs.' For the moment, we are using the term Hygrade lamp bulbs; occasionally, we use the phrase 'incandescent lamp;' sometimes we say 'incandescent lamp bulb,' and once in a while we use the word 'bulb' alone, for the sake of brevity.

"The elder men in our industry seem to prefer the word 'incandescent,' applied to lamp or 'bulb.' Yet incandescent does not have any identification value because it applies equally well to Welsbach gas mantles. The single word 'lamp' is really misleading, for there are many other kinds of lamps—floor lamps, table lamps, kerosene lamps, gas lamps, and even whale-oil lamps. The term, therefore, is entirely too general. 'Bulb' is a bit more specific, although used alone it may be confused with plant bulbs, rubber bulbs, &c."

The situation with your radio tubes is just about as bad, Mr. Poor, what with speaking tubes, &c.

Having failed to receive a passing grade in showmanship from a leading theatrical periodical, N. B. C. in Washington once more sets out to do something about it.

This morning it turns the WMAL Breakfast Club over to still another president, Sidney Ten Eyck, who recently was imported from Cincinnati and whose name probably was a step in the right direction.

That leaves Don Douglas, the latest of the Breakfast Club's retired presidents, free to do interviews and a mysterious something the minds have decided shall be the next step toward improved showmanship.

AFTER several changes of mind, Columbia now comes forward with an announcement that it definitely will broadcast the Philippine Legislature in session for consideration of Tydings-McDuffie independence measure from 11 to 11:30 tonight. For a time, no one could be very certain when a vote would be taken. In the first place, Manuel Quezon, president of the Senate, and No. 1 politico in the islands, was somewhere between Shanghai and Manila and not at all certain when he would get home. It now appears that Mr. Quezon will reach his homeland in time to see that everything comes off in good order.

Before dispensing with the Philippines for today, some of you may be interested in knowing that Columbia's publicity department has come up with very good evidence that Morton Downey, who once had a Filipino valet, is the possessor of a first-rate sense of humor as well as an engaging voice.

On the eve of the departure of the valet, Mr. d'Tilanos, for Ireland after winning $15,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes, he received, according to the good people in the C. B. S. public relations office, this message from Downey:

"Congratulations stop can you use a good Irish Valet who also sings stop please advise."

Culpeper Host To Methodists For Two Days

Delegates of 10 Counties Open Conference Wednesday.

Culpeper, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Methodist from ten counties will attend the sixty-eighth annual session of the Charlottesville District Conference here Wednesday and Thursday.

There are 28 charges within the district, with a membership of approximately 118,000. The counties are Albermarle, Nelson, Amherst, Orange, Greene, Culpeper, Madison, Rappahannock, Louisa and Hanover.

Dr. Daniel T. Merritt, of Charlottesville, will preside over the conference, which will assemble in the Methodist Church at 9 a. m., Wednesday. After the opening worship, reports from the pastoral charges will be made.

The Rev. Frank Burruss, of White Hall, will submit the report on Bible cause and Charles B. Hopkins, of Culpeper, that on hospital work. The report on Madison Mission will be made by the Rev. M. F. Draper, of Culpeper, who will be followed by Dr. J. T. Mastin, of Richmond, who will tell of the work being done by the Virginia Conference orphanage.

Report on Temperance.

Following the report on temperance and social service, by the Rev. J. H. Abernathy, of Lovingston, the Rev. W. S. Deyerle, pastor of Highland Park Church, Richmond, will address the conference on "Some Moral Issues Faced by the Recent Legislature."

A feature of the morning program will be an observance of the sesquicentennial of American Methodism —1784-1934. An historical paper will be read by the Rev. W. A. Orser, pastor of the Hinton avenue church, of Charlottesville, and brief addresses will be made by H. H. Johnson, of Brightwood; T. E. Johnson, of Rochelle; E. R. Collie, of Monroe; L. C. Vaughan, of Palmyra, and George E. Powell, of Louisa.

The afternoon session will be given over to a missionary program. The Rev. R. C. Barbour, of Batesville, will read the report on missions and the speaker will be the Rev. J. Manning Potts, missionary secretary of the Virginia conference. Mrs. T. G. Pullen, of Flint Hill, district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, will describe the work of her organization.

Dr. Wright to Speak.

The report on Christian education will be made by the Rev. H. S. Southgate, of Unionville, and the address on the same subject will be made by Dr. W. Archer Wright, of Richmond, former presiding elder of the Charlottesville district. The Rev. E. H. Hopkins, of Beaver Dam, will talk on the superannuate endowment. The sermon at night will be delivered by a former pastor of the Culpeper Church, Dr. Frank L. Wells, now of Park Place, Norfolk.

The final session of the conference will be held Thursday morning, when delegates to the annual conference will be elected. The Rev. H. L. Weston, of North Garden, will make the report on ministerial supply and training, and H. G. Watts, of Mount Pleasant, will discuss the quarterly conference records.

M. V. Pence, of Charlottesville, will report on lay activities within the district, and the Rev. O. L. Haga, of Flint Hill, on the spiritual state of the church. The closing sermon will be by Dr. J. W. Smith, pastor of Centenary Church, Richmond.

The little lady shown above will play a leading public role in the Apple Blossom Festival Thursday and Friday at Winchester, Va., while the success of the noted fete largely depends on the three men. Left to right are Director General J. Pinckeny Arthur, William E. Cooper, chairman of the executive committee, and Jack T. Engle, parade director, who have guided the work incident to producing the celebration. At the right is Charlotte Pazey Lupton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mc Sherry Lupton, of Winchester, Va., who will be crown bearer at the coronation of Mrs. John Hay Whitney as Queen Shenandoah XI at the festival.

Crowds View Apple Blooms Of Shenandoah

Blossom Week Opens as Winchester Welcomes Visitors' Van.

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, April 29.—Blossom week, the climax of which will be reached with the Shenandoah apple blossom festival here Thursday and Friday, was ushered in today with a majority of the 11,000,000 apple trees in bloom and more than 20,000 visitors present to view the blossoming.

Beginning early today, Winchester was the Mecca for the visitors, the majority of whom were from the District of Columbia and adjacent sections. Motorists lined highways near which lie many apple orchards.

Winchester welcomed the visitors with streets decorated in pink, green and white, while the festival organization made ready for the festival Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Llangollen, near Upperville, will be crowned Queen Shenandoah.

The Rev. Dr. S. L. Flickinger, Winchester, after weeks of study in the Library of Congress at Washington, has completed the translation of the ancient ceremonials of Anglo-Saxons for the coronation of Mrs. Whitney. Preeminent in the ceremony will be the ritual used at the coronation of Alfred the Great.

Dr. Charles R. Anderson, mayor of Winchester, will represent the State and the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, Winchester, the church. Lewis Douglas, Washington, director of the Federal Budget, will officially crown Mrs. Whitney, who will be attended by a court of 29 princesses from girls' schools of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia. Late yesterday, Gov. George C. Peery, Virginia, informed apple blossom officials that he and a large number of his staff would attend the festival. The festival will officially open at 10 o'clock Thursday morning when 3,000 school children, attired in gay costumes of springtime, will parade through the streets of Winchester in "The trail of human blossoms."

Turkey Knob Suit Payment Ordered

Mount Jackson, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—A $12,000 payment of receivers' certificates, out of a total of $25,500 due, has been ordered by Judge Philip Williams in Frederick County Circuit Court in the suit styled Artemus Ward's Administrator et al. vs. C. E. Gudebrod, and C. E. Gudebrod vs. Artemus Ward's Administrator et al., which affects the large Turkey Knob orchards west of here.

Judge F. S. Tavenner, of Woodstock, and Herbert S. Larrick, of Winchester, the receivers, it was shown the court, now have in their possession sufficient funds to pay off the amount ordered, and still hold in reserve sufficient funds to meet taxes, insurance and repairs.

Turkey Knob orchards, among the largest and most prolific in the Shenandoah Valley, are at present under lease to Senator Harry F. Byrd and his brother, Thomas B. Byrd.

Welfare Board Members Named.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Berkeley County Court yesterday appointed two new members to the county welfare board, at the request of Maj. Francis W. Turner, director of the State welfare board. J. M. Goddell, of Middleway, and W. P. Licklider, of Shepherdstown, were the new appointees. Mr. Goddell will serve one year and Mr. Licklider two.

Shipping Is Warned Of Mined Channel

Norfolk, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—The War Department has ordered mines placed in Hampton Roads, and in order to warn shipping of their presence, the lighthouse service, through L. M. Hopkins, superintendent of the Fifth District, of which Hampton Roads is a unit, has issued a warning to give the area a wide berth.

The area as described in the warning is charted.

Campbell County Sheriff's Wood Sale Brings Ouster Suit

Rustburg, Va., April 29 (AP).—Judge Henry C. Leigh yesterday withheld decision whether to oust Robert L. Perrow as sheriff of Campbell County because he is guilty of a technical violation of the law.

At the conclusion of the one-day trial the judge said he would seek further light on the law involved and invited defense attorneys to show him how he could acquit the sheriff without ignoring section 2707 of the Code of Virginia, under which the officer was tried.

Judge Leigh said that when Sheriff Perrow bought six cords of wood for the county jail from his private farm, he was guilty of violating the statute. Inasmuch as the sheriff testified he was ignorant of the prohibition, and inasmuch as this transaction was the only one of eight charges with which the court concerned itself, he said he was inclined to acquit the defendant, but he expressed the belief that the section in question leaves no course but ouster.

State Scientists Gather Friday

Report on Cancer Study to Be Given at Session in Harrisonburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Papers by prominent Virginia scientists will be read before the Virginia Academy of Science at its annual conference here next Friday and Saturday.

E. C. Cocke, of the University of Virginia, will describe Eastern Virginia's famous Dismal Swamp, while his colleague, Prof. E. G. Pickels, will lead a discussion of the development of the ultracentrifuge and show the effects of high tension strains in glass, metal, &c., under the microscope.

The discovery of a unique relationship in gas interdiffusion will be set forth in a paper prepared by L. H. Fling, of Alexandria. Virginia Polytechnical Institute professors will announce the results of a study of the Tyndall beam effect in viscose, a method of optics which may help to determine exact ripening periods of viscose solutions for the spinning of rayon.

Reporting on a study of the effects of heredity in children with cancerous fathers, Dr. Frank L. Apperly, of the Medical College of Virginia, is expected to arouse widespread interest. His report will show that no hereditary cancerous tendencies were found in children whose fathers had cancer, but that 56 per cent of the daughters of cancerous mothers had achlorhydria, a lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, which often precedes gastric cancer in women.

125 Given Free Seed.

Lancaster, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Seed and fertilizer have been distributed to 125 Lancaster County families under the FERA subsistence garden program, Mrs. Irene Davenport, county garden director, announces.

U.S.S. New Orleans To Cross Atlantic

Recently Built Cruiser Not to Join Fleet.

Norfolk, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—The new 10,000-ton cruiser New Orleans, fresh from the shipyard, will sail May 4 for an extended trip to European ports and will not join the United States fleet off New York, May 31, as previously announced.

The cruiser is to have a shakedown cruise along the Virginia Coast and will then set out for England, Holland, Belgium and Denmark. Besides a number of British ports, she will visit Kiel, Rotterdam, Antwerp and Copenhagen.

She is due to return to American waters in the fall and is scheduled to arrive at New Orleans, November 1, to receive a silver service presented by that municipality. The vessel was previously listed as being assigned to a cruise to the West Indies, thence to New York to join the United States fleet.

District Oratorical Winners Are Named at Fredericksburg

Leaders to Take Part in Literary Contests at University.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Representatives of District A of the Virginia Literary League at the State championship events to be held at the University of Virginia May 11 and 12 were chosen yesterday in debating, public speaking, spelling and reading contests at Fredericksburg State Teachers College.

The district debate is argued: "That the executive form of government should be adopted by Virginia counties." The affirmative team of Miss Julia Pennington and Miss Frances Marchant, of Colonial Beach High School, won against four other combinations. Miss Anne Will Taylor and Miss Clarice Taylor, also of Colonial Beach High School, won the right to represent District A o nthe negative.

Miss Virginia Harris, of Montross High School, Westmoreland County, and Lewis C. Laird, of White Stone High School, Lancaster County, won the girls' and boys' speaking contests.

District A will be represented by Miss Virginia Dickinson, of Chancellor High School, Spotsylvania County, in the girl readers' class, and by William Dickinson, of the same school, in the boy readers' class. Oldham Brillheart, of Farnham High School, Richmond County, won the spelling contest.

C. Thomas Pugh, of Ruther Glenn, won the Future Farmers of America oratorical contest, speaking on "The Future Farmer of Virginia."

The high schools represented in the contests were Farnham, Colonial Beach, Robert E. Lee, Callao, White Stone, Heathsville, Chancellor, Lively, Wicomico and Ruther Glen.

Georgetown Group Plans Norfolk Visit

Propeller Club Member to Visit Naval Base.

Norfolk, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—About 60 students of Georgetown University will arrive here from Washington next Saturday and will be guests of the Fifth Naval District and the Propeller Club of Hampton Roads. The students are members of the Third Student Propeller Club, recently organized by Arthur Tode, president of the Propeller Clubs of the United States.

On their arrival here the students will be entertained at breakfast by the Propeller Club of Hampton Roads, and later will visit the navy yard and the Norfolk Naval Base as guests of the naval authority. They are to return to Washington Sunday.

One of the features arranged for them is a visit to the battleship Idaho, now being modernized at the Norfolk Navy Yard. The visitors also will inspect the new airplane carrier Ranger, now nearing completion at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

Minister Urges Lottery to Ban 'Rigged' Games

"All Life's a Chance," Says Richmond Divine, Asking State Control.

Richmond, April 29 (AP).—Establishment of a State lottery as a means of combatting "rigged" games of chance "on the same basis that the State is establishing liquor stores" was urged tonight by the Rev. Addison Moore, D. D., minister of the First Unitarian Church of Richmond, as he commented on a sermon preached by him earlier in the day.

In his sermon Dr. Moore said that slot machines which are fixed against the player are "as evil as loaded dice" but added that "men and women who amount to anything dare to take a chance."

The new morality does not frown on games of chance," the minister said, "but it asserts that only fools play for money in games that are rigged against them.

"Slot machines, for instance, are fixed against the player so that he can never win back a small percentage of his money. Such machines as are used to distribute some commodity are legitimate, but when they are used to breed gamblers they are pernicious and ought to be smashed, for they are as evil as loaded dice.

"The policy game, however, is a different matter. Its numbers can not be manipulated and the evil about it is to be found in two facts—first, the profits are shared only by an out-of-town syndicate, which controls it; and second, children are allured by the game. The first fact can be done away with by making the State control the thing as a lottery, and the second fact can be eliminated by making it a criminal offense to sell policy slips to minors.

"Skilled investigators have revealed that the slot machines and the policy games take $2,000,000 out of Richmond each year. Why do our tax-making authorities permit this to happen? They could stop it by legalizing a State lottery which would at once protect children from gambling and provide a new source of revenue for the State.

"Most reformers and clergymen seem to hate games of chance, matrimony being the only game of chance favored by most of the clergy. But some of them are coming to see that all life is a game of chance and we develop skill at it only at life's long last.

"It is a good thing that the instinct to take a chance is a part of human nature or we'd never get anywhere at all.

"I knew a young man who was a bank clerk. He did well at it. He was offered the position of manager of a new financial institution in a nearby town, but after considering the matter he decided to stay where he was. He wouldn't take a chance because he was like a canary in a cage, and if he got out he was afraid he'd starve to death.

"Men and women who amount to anything dare to take a chance, and human nature exercises itself in games of chance. To wager a little money on a card-game, or on a horse-race, or on a lottery, adds zest to the game and harms no one's morals except the gambler's. He is a person whose appetite for taking chances is unfortunately over-developed, like the appetite of the dipsomaniac. The gambler, as well as the dipsomaniac, should be sent to a psychiatrist and cured. They can not be cured by legislation.

Contractor Killed In Strasburg Crash

Bernard Z. Brown Victim; 2 Others Injured.

Strasburg, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Bernard Z. Brown, 59, Strasburg contractor, was fatally injured last night in a head-on automobile collision on the Riverton-Strasburg road east of here. He suffered a frctured skull and died in Memorial Hospital at Winchester.

Mrs. Elizabeth Venable, daughter of Brown, and wife of Fulton Venable, who was driving the car, suffered a fracture of the jaw and body lacerations. She also was taken to the hospital. Venable suffered bruises about the body.

The identity of the driver and occupants of the other car could not be learned. It was understood they escaped injury.

1,100 Men Hold Church Session

Celebrate Anniversary of Baraca Classes at Waynesboro.

Waynesboro, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Eleven hundred men met at the First Presbyterian Church here today in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the first Baraca class in Waynesboro. The Cadet Corps of Fishburn Military School, the entire company of Sand Spring CCC camp and members of organized Bible classes in Augusta, Albemarle, Nelson and Rockingham Counties joined in the meeting.

Dr. R. S. Owens, of Calvary Baptist Church, Roanoke, formerly pastor of the Waynesboro Baptist Church and sponsor of the original Baraca class here, was the principal speaker. He was presented by Col. Morgan H. Hudgins, of the Fishburn School.

An orchestra composed of musicians from all the churches in the city presented a special program and mass singing of the entire audience was led by Louis Spilman. A feature was a duet by J. Guy Russmiselle and Ernest Ryder.

Capt. W. S. Thomas, chaplain of Staunton Military Academy, and the Rev. R. W. Cousar, pastor of the host church, also participated in the program. C. C. Leap was chairman of the anniversary event and W. W. White secretary.

Rep. Darden Opens Re-Election Race

Norfolk Legislator May Be Unopposed.

Norfolk, Va., April 29 (AP).—Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., at home in Norfolk for the week-end, today made formal announcement of his candidacy for re-election, subject to the Democratic primary.

The prospects are now that he will be unopposed for the Democratic nomination, in which event he will be declared the nominee and the primary, scheduled for August 7, will not be held.

Mr. Darden expressed the belief that the people of the United States today have even a firmer confidence in President Roosevelt than they had a year ago.

U. S. Aid Asked In Milk Battle

Conditions Called Chaotic in Portsmouth With Prices Slashed.

Portsmouth, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Charging that a chaotic price condition on milk has developed in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area, Portsmouth independent grocers today took their problems to the Federal Trade Commission.

The milk situation in Portsmouth came to public attention about two weeks ago when independent grocers declined to continue relations with several of the distributors serving chain stores. A drop in price followed and the distributors serving the independents also lowered their prices.

Consumers eventually were notified by some of the distributors that a 5 and 10 cent price for pints and quarts of milk would prevail.

W. L. Baille, secretary of the Portsmouth Independent Retail Grocers, who communicated with the Federal Trade Commission, received a telegram from James A. Horton, chief examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, promising immediate investigation.

Horton said the local milk situation had been referred to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration authorities. Secretary Baillie immediately wired the AAA a copy of his original letter sent to the trade commission.

VERA to Finish Shenandoah Jobs

New Market, Va., April 29 (Spl.). Shenandoah County CWA projects, which have lain dormant since March 31, have been scheduled for completion by the VERA, according to a statement by Harold G. Chandler, newly appointed projects engineer.

In addition to several county school board projects, New Market has three left uncompleted by the CWA; Mount Jackson and Woodstock each have two and Edinburg, Toms Brook and Strasburg have one each. It is expected operations will be resumed on all former CWA undertakings soon after May 1.

School sanitation projects which were started under CWA will be resumed, provided the board of supervisors make an appropriation covering necessary expenditures for foremen and materials.

Millions of Pounds of Food Roll Toward Norfolk for Fleet

Norfolk, Va., April 29 (AP).—Millions of pounds of meat, millions of pounds of milk, a million and a half feet of lumber, a trainload of eggs, hundreds of thousands of pounds of vegetables, fruits, pickles, sugar and other supplies are on their way to the naval operating base for the United States fleet.

Thirty-two carloads of eggs, approximately 550,000 dozens, are expected to arrive tomorrow and will be followed by another trainload of beef and other foods.

Capt. Emmett C. Gudger, attached to the supply depot at the base, stated today that the supply of provisions to be assembled here for the fleet probably will be the largest since the World War, when Norfolk was the supply base for practically the entire Navy.

He stated that $1,000,000 would be spent for supplies exclusive of food, such as lumber and other materials needed by the ships. A purchase of 1,500,000 feet of North Carolina pine lumber has already been made, he said.

Six supply ships will be employed steadily during the stay of the fleet in the Atlantic in transporting provisions from Norfolk to various points on the Coast.

The election will be held at the Roanoke conference in May. Dr. Wright is past president of the Harrisonburg Club.

Relief Levy Seen by Board

Washington County Parley Hears State Aid Cite Tax Law.

Hagerstown, Md., April 29 (Spl.). Indications that the Board of County Commissioners will be asked to levy money for relief purposes in June, came following a conference here between the Washington County Welfare Federation, the Board of County Commissioners and Harry Greenstein, State Relief administrator.

Greenstein indicated that after June 1, State and Federal funds would be given only to counties which take steps to meet their own problems, calling attention to the law passed at the special legislative session giving county boards authority to levy 8 cents on the $100 for relief purposes.

Commenting on the efficiency of the local relief organization, Greenstein said only 7 per cent of relief money appropriated to Washington County had been spent for administrative purposes and relief cases were kept to 14 per cent of the population. In some counties the percentage was as high as 45.

Total expenditures of the local relief board for the fiscal year ended March 31 were $148,397. Relief cases increased in March over previous months, the report showed, there being 2,012, as compared to 1,263 in February and 1,041 in January.

Greenstein also said that under the present work relief program, as many heads of families as possible would be given work.

$7,400,000 Road Fund Anticipation

Virginia Awaits Action on Bill in Congress.

Richmond, April 29 (AP).—Virginia may receive as much as $7,400,000 for road work during the fiscal year, beginning July 1, the State highway department estimated yesterday. The payments depend on the passage of the road appropriations bill, now before Congress.

The measure is designed to appropriate $400,000,000 to the States for read work. The bill has been reported to the House.

The estimate of $7,400,000 is based, it was explained here, on the assumption that the bill would not be trimmed on the floor of either House or Senate before its final passage.

Home Building Pledges At Covington Increase

Covington, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—The stockholders committee of the Covington Home Building Corporation announced yesterday that $19,500 has been pledged in support of the plan to raise $34,500 with which it is hoped to save local investors what they have put into the corporation. The committee is of the opinion that if $25,000 can be raised the remainder can be obtained from banks here.

Local stockholders will have a last opportunity tomorrow to pledge their financial support to the plan.

Friendly And Fair.

Every year a few friendly Senators talk of surveying the fiscal relationship between the District and the Federal Government with a view to securing a more adequate contribution from the Treasury. It is encouraging to note that the Senate sub-committee studying District appropriations is again directing its efforts toward that objective. But optimism over the outcome would be premature. In recent years Congress has invariably fallen back upon the expedient of appropriating a "lump sum," and the lump sum is usually sujected to severe chiseling. Congressmen become imbued with the idea that they are being generous to the Capital City, when they let the Federal Government pay a part of the bills incurred by Washington in its behalf.

Knowing how difficult it is to overcome this false sense of generosity, Senator Thomas, chairman of the District Appropriations sub-committee, recently proposed that the local tax rate be increased and property valuations be cut so as to make our tax statistics comparable to those of other communities. So long as the District has a levy of $1.50 per $100 of valuation Congressmen have a hard time to explain to their constituents the need of a Federal contribution to the Capital City. Most Congressmen realize, of course, that property in Washington is appraised at 100 per cent of its value for tax purposes, while in most cities valuations are limited to 50 or 60 per cent. Of course, there is no difference in the revenue produced by a $1.50 tax rate with a 100 per cent valuation and a $3 tax rate on a 50 per cent valuation. It would merely help to dispel the illusion that District taxes are extremely low.

Camouflage of this sort should not be necessary to induce Congress to deal fairly with the District. Yet it is an unquestionable fact that the apparently low tax rate here is an impediment to equitable adjustment of the Federal contribution. Senator Thomas has unwittingly accused Congress of stupidity or political cowardice in dealing with Washington's fiscal problems. Whether or not his suggestion is adopted, it stands as an emphatic illustration of the warped reasoning which has pervaded Congress when District fiscal matters have been under consideration.

If the Senators in charge of District appropriations can secure a square deal for the Capital City by this or any other means they will be entitled to the everlasting gratitude of local taxpayers.

Non-Partisan Tariff Plea.

In a radio address delivered last evening under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Council on International Cooperation, Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, unreservedly indorsed the pending tariff bill. His advocacy will do much to remove this measure from an atmosphere of partisan debate which has threatened to obscure its essentially nonpartisan character. Mr. Stimson is "not impressed with the objection that it would give undue or dictatorial powers to our Executive." "The legislation is for the purpose of meeting temporarily an emergent situation," he said. "I see no reason to believe that it will be abused." He recalled that a similar objection was raised when adoption of the Executive budget was under consideration.

Mr. Stimson appears to be an aggressive advocate of reciprocal tariff agreements, believing them to be essential, if the United States is not to be shouldered out of the foreign trade field. Our cumbersome methods of making changes in tariff schedules are not adapted to present day disordered conditions. Other nations have "vested far greater powers of initiative in their executives," says Mr. Stimson, "and their executives can act with much greater promptness in an emergency than can be done by our Congress or even our Tariff Commission under present laws. In every parliamentary government, for example, the executive in the shape of the Prime Minister, and his cabinet, frames the tariff with a view to the national requirements and its ratification by the Parliament usually follows much as a matter of course."

Even admitting that the United States is handicapped by its present tariff procedure, it may be argued that the benefits of negotiated agreements will not be great enough to warrant a change in the status quo. On this point, too, Mr. Stimson speaks with conviction. He believes, with Secretary Wallace, that a healthy international commerce is essential to healthy nationalism. By "healthy" he does not mean that tariff barriers should be torn down and American industry be subjected to destructive competition. Some liberalization of tariffs seems desirable, however, to save the country from compulsory control of production and marketing on a nation-wide scale. This alternative, Mr. Stimson agrees, is inescapable if we are to be permanently deprived of outlets for our surplus agricultural and industrial products.

The present chaotic conditions are regarded as a temporary result of the dislocations produced by the World War, and the present tariff bill is approved as essentially an emergency device to stimulate foreign trade during this period. Mr. Stimson believes that constructive steps are necessary to secure for the United States a fair share of international commerce. The reciprocal tariff bill seems to provide a practical expedient toward that end.

"In A Fool's Paradise."

The people of the United States, says Joseph H. Choate, jr., director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, are living in a fool's paradise, unaware of the size and power of the bootleg liquor trade. Mr. Choate particularly emphasizes the tremendous growth of illicit distilling, beside which, he says, smuggling and industrial alcohol diversion are "trifling excrescences."

Moreover, it is believed that the illegal distilling capacity of the country is at present far in excess of the legal capacity, although Mr. Choate thinks that the latter will "probably be able to supply not only as much as it can sell under present taxes and against the present bootleg competition, but as much as we used to drink before prohibition, as well as some storage for aging." Dr. Doran, who is now supervisor of the Distillers' Code Authority, says, however, that current consumption of tax-paid liquor is only about one-fifth the producing capacity of the legalized industry. In other words, only 10,000,000 gallons of taxed liquor were consumed during the first four months of the year, although the distilleries were equipped to furnish five times that amount of liquor.

The American people are not only living in in a "fool's pardaise," but they have succeeded in creating a real paradise for bootleggers. hTe difficulties may he summed up briefly as due to high taxes, high selling prices and extremely high import duties, plus annoying restrictions upon methods of sale and consumption of legalized liquors. Relaxation of limitations upon the quantity of liquor domestically produced and imported has not availed to rout the bootlegger as shown by the evidence. Illicit distillers will be with us as long as they can profitably undercut prices charged for the legalized product. Neither will the appropriation of more Federal money for enforcement purposes suppress the illicit trade, although it will of course help to do so.

In pre-prohibition days, the Bureau of Internal Revenue had a highly efficient system for protecting the country against the "moonshiner"—one that it had taken many years to build up. But with the best endeavors of trained agents, even when the tax on distilled spirits was fixed at the low level of 90 cents per proof gallon, there was a certain amount of illicit distilling that escaped detection. Today we have a much higher Federal excise, with additional State taxes and licenses, and innumerable restrictions upon liquor sales that increase the incentive to evasion. Furthermore, a large number of States are still legally "dry," and they continue to present the enforcement problems of the era of the eighteenth amendment.

There is only one effective way to suppress the evils of bootlegging—that is to follow Mr. Choate's recommendations to cheapen and improve the quality of the legal product, reduce taxes and import duties, thus making it easier to buy legal beverages than to purchase illegal ones. Such a policy would not only aid law enforcement, but it would provide a more dependable and probably a more abundant revenue for the Government.

Low-Cost Housing.

Plans for the construction of low-cost housing units in Washington are developing slowly. Nevertheless, they are being watched with intense interest. The alley-clearance project is of special importance to the people who live in these unsightly and insanitary quarters, but it has a broad community appeal because all the people of Washington are exposed to the disease and crime originating in these infected areas.

Without in any way diminishing the importance of eliminating alley hovels, we must recognize that this is only one aspect of Washington's housing problem. A recent survey by the Public Utilities Commission showed an acute shortage of suitable dwellings for families of moderate means. Since the war the supply of higher-priced apartments and homes has been augmented by about 50 per cent. But the needs of families with small and average incomes have been singularly neglected. The findings of the PUC indicate that modern dwellings can be constructed and operated for much less rent than the average family is now paying. Yet private capital has failed to initiate low-cost housing projects on an extensive scale.

The purpose of the EHC is to demonstrate that modern, sanitary dwellings with pleasant surroundings may be provided at reasonable rentals. Several large cities have already proved the feasibility of such undertakings. It seems quite proper that the Government should conduct an experiment of this kind in the National Capital, although its intention to take over this municipal responsibility in other cities throughout the country has aroused rather grave misgivings. In general, the low-cost housing program would be far more satisfactory if it were going forward as a series of community enterprises rather than as a Federal undertaking.

Projects of this kind are significant if they point the way for private enterprise to render greater service to the community. Of course, there is no excuse for subsidization of those families who may obtain quarters in houses built with taxpayers' money. The first prerequisite of community housing is that it be kept on a strictly business basis. If these Federal projects should develop into a racket, as other "letter" undertakings have done, the price would be excessive even for such essential developments as elimination of slums and hovels.

Still Immersed In Politics.

Confusion over the air-mail situation is not substantially diminished by the Senate's acceptance of the McKellar-Black bill. It is evident that the Senate wishes to be rid of the issue. But the majority is torn between a desire to uphold Postmaster General Farley's cancellation blunder and to return the air mail to competent private carriers as soon as possible. Consequently, the bill adopted by the Senate is a conglomeration of inconsistencies.

In accord with President Roosevelt's wishes, provision is made for a bipartisan commission to formulate a broad policy covering all phases of aviation. Since military aviation is already being scrutinized by proper authorities, the chief function of this body would be development of a new air-mail policy. But the McKellar-Black bill itself outlines such a policy. It provides for the letting of temporary contracts, and then for regulation of the air mail by the Interstate Commerce Commission. If Congress intends to enact permanent air-mail legislation now, what is the use of spending $100,000 for a study of the system?

Voting to authorize suits against the Government by companies whose contracts were canceled, the Senate has recognized the gross injustice of Mr. Farley's action. Through this means the former carriers may obtain a belated airing of the charges against them. Yet the Senate still insists on condemning them without trial, by requiring reorganization of the companies before they may be considered eligible to bid for temporary contracts. In this respect the House bill, introduced by Chairman Mead of the Postoffice Committee, is much more reasonable.

Perhaps the weakest part of the whole plan to return the air mail to private carriers is that contracts would be awarded at the discretion of a Postmaster General who is chairman of the Democratic National Committee. By his failure to produce evidence of fraud and collusion against the victims of his cancellation order and his adherence to the principle of condemnation without trial, Mr. Farley has given strength to the assumption that he was animated by politics. Since the law gives him a certain discretion in the awarding of contracts, there is a great deal of apprehension that political considerations may enter into the proposed realignment of the air-mail system.

Moreover, Mr. Farley is boasting that a "more economical air-mail service" will result from his cancellation order. To ward off criticism of his original blunder he may be inclined to accept all the lowest bids and thus make a show of saving money for the Government. But other factors are involved. Some of the bidders are said to be using discarded and obsolete airplanes. Of course, the purpose of subsidizing aviation through mail contracts is to develop that industry and encourage flying. If "economy" were the only objective it might be accomplished by abolishing the air mail. Certainly if the Government is to continue granting subsidies in this manner, they should be used to promote the broad interests of aviation and not to bring obsolete and unsafe equipment into use. It is a pity that these matters are to be decided by the active leader of a political party who is already widely accused of letting partisanship influence his official acts.

Exorcising Babel.

A few years ago it was the common complaint of theatrical producers that John Galsworthy wrote plays which presented production with progressively greater difficulties. The criticism has been made of other modern dramatists. Occasionally, however, an ingenious playwright solves the impresarios' perplexities instead of augmenting them.

For many years the producer has sought vainly for a dramatic device which would interpret one country of alien language and customs to another. But the language was the stumbling-block. If you presented here a Czech play in the Czech tongue, few of your audience would understand it. If translated, many of its essential qualities would be lost. And a printed or spoken synopsis delayed action or forestalled climax.

Mrs. Paul Scheffer offers an interesting answer to this problem in her play, "How Do You Like This Country?" performed a few nights back for the benefit of the local Russian Orthodox Church. The scene is prerevolutionary Russia. The hero is an American who understands no Russian, placed in a setting where most of the characters speak only Russian. But the few English-speaking Russian characters translate for the American's benefit just so much of what is said as he would naturally inquire about, while he—and the audience with him—deduce therefrom the rest of the dialogue.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

WEARING CREPE on their arms and bearing black-bordered banners, a group of men and women led by Upton Sinclair, silently paraded back and forth in front of 26 Broadway, N. Y., yesterday, in mute protest against the treatment of miners in the Colorado coal fields. Sinclair and others were arrested. "There are murderers in 26 Broadway who should answer to the law before me," said Sinclair in his cell. No. 26 Broadway was the office of the Standard Oil Co. and John D. Rockefeller, jr., was the object of the paraders' scorn. Nine more men died near Denver in fighting between guards and miners during the day.

Letters to the Editor

Protesting Night Parking Ban.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of April 25 regarding all-night parking is the sentiment of 75 per cent of Washington motorists. Mr. Van Duzer seems bent upon making things very uncomfortable for the motorists. He should concentrate on straightening out the Traffic Bureau itself. In the past year it has resembled a madhouse, with the least possible system.

I hope The Post will fight this all-night parking ban, as it is entirely unfair to the residents. In my section of the city, I would have to walk five blocks to a garage and might just as well dispose of the car if the law should come in effect.

"ALL-NIGHT PARKER."
Washington, April 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with considerable interest and disgust of the proposed ban on all-night parking. I would like to ask what is to be done with the cars at night? On April 24 at 2 a. m. there were 106 cars parked on Thirtieth street in Georgetown between M street and R street. On April 25 at the same hour and place there were 116 cars parked. Try and find garages in Georgetown for just these cars alone. I, for one, park on the street all night for the simple reason I have no other place to park. I am a taxpayer in the District and have paid an assessment for repairing the street in front of my property and I should have a right to use the street. I will admit that parked cars are a nuisance on the street, but are they more of a nuisance in the quiet hours of the night than in the day when the flow of traffic is at its height? It is a very peculiar condition which allows cars to park all day and early hours of the night when all at once on the stroke of a certain hour they become a nuisance.

J. A. B.
Washington, April 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regards to the order that will prohibit all-night parking in Washington, I would like to know just how that will solve the traffic problem. After 10 p. m. there is very little traffic on the streets, so the problem is the day traffic. I have lived in cities that prohibited all-night parking and up to midnight or later the streets were just as congested with cars as the streets here. You can not order cars off the streets before 1 a. m. or 2 a. m. Again, what will happen to the large number of visitors that drive here every year, or will there be two laws, one for the visitor and one for the resident?

To prohibit all-night parking is not the solution to the problem, especially when there is not enough garage space to take care of the cars. I am sure no one will say that about 20 per cent of the car owners must get rid of their cars and no more cars can be sold or bought in Washington.

I would like to add that I have a garage and do not park my car on the street. A CAR OWNER.
Washington, April 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am anxiously awaiting the decision as to whether or not overnight parking will be prohibited in Washington. Until recently I had fully expected to purchase a new automobile to replace my present (five-year old) machine. However, a new automobile will be utterly impossible if I will have to pay garage rent in addition to my present expense. In fact, I shall have to discontinue using an automobile at all. (I wonder how many other small salaried employes are postponing purchases on this account.)

It seems to me that an over-night parking ban would affect automobile dealers, repairmen, and gasoline dealers adversely. The only persons to profit from restricted parking would be owners of garages for rent, and they are foremost in agitating the question. M. C.

Japan's Side Of The Case.

(From an article by F. R. Eldridge, of New York University, in Current History for May.)

MORE than one observer of events in the Far East has declared that Japan is a war-crazed nation ruled by a military caste like that of pre-war Prussia. We have been told also that a conflict in the Pacific area is inevitable because of the Japanese temper, and that the island empire represents at present the greatest menace to the peace of the world. A dispassionate review of the factors involved, however, leads to another conclusion. Japan does not want war. She wants only security and the opportunity to trade peacefully throughout the world . . .

The all-important question to Japan is how to utilize her vast labor resources in the fabrication of products and how to sell these products abroad to obtain the foreign exchange with which to pay for the essential imports. No country in this position wants war. War destroys commerce. It creates hatreds and antipathies that dry up the roots of international good-will upon which commerce thrives

A war with Russia, . . . , unless it were forced upon Japan, seems unlikely, although if Japan really wanted to fight with her great rival she would have no difficulty in picking a quarrel.

There is, for instance, the ever-present fisheries dispute. Because the yen has depreciated since the agreement was made by which Japanese fishermen pay so many yen per ton to take their boats into the territorial waters of the Siberian Maritime Provinces, Russia is seeking to raise these charges. Japan objects and the matter remains a question which must be settled shortly.

THIS matter has been disputed many times before; but as Japan has a market for the fish and Russia has not, Japan usually wins her point. She is the buyer, and the fish are being offered, so to speak, in a buyers' market. If Japanese fishermen did not take them, they would remain in the sea and Russia would get no revenue whatsoever. But even were she prevented from sending her boats into Russian waters, because of the prohibitive fees, Japan would hardly go to war about it. The whole value of the catch would not pay for a week of warfare.

There has been Russo-Japanese friction, moreover, over the Chinese Eastern Railroad. With the construction of new lines from Seishin, on the Chosen coast to Manchuli, on the Siberian border, the Chinese Eastern Railroad has been rendered of little commercial value, and the Russians are willing to sell it to Manchukuo for 200,000,000 yen. When asked who will assume the bonded indebtedness held by the Russo-Asiatic Bank, which lent the money to the Czar to build the road in 1896, the Soviet officials shrug their shoulders. They have repudiated all Czarist debts. Yet, if Manchukuo could pay Soviet Russia the full amount asked, the French and White Russian bondholders would look to Manchukuo for payment of the bonded indebtedness. Manchukuo has offered Russia about 40,000,000 yen for the railroad on the assumption that she would be liable for the repudiated debt were the case brought to court. Thus the matter stands . . .

JAPAN wants to trade peacefully with China. She wants to exchange her manufactured goods for China's raw materials and foodstuffs without having boycotts launched against her. Japan realizes that political domination is not necessary to her peaceful trade with China, and that all she needs is the removal of the disturbing influences that have lead peaceful Chinese merchants to refuse to carry Japanese goods, even though there was a demand for them. These influences in the past could be pretty generally traced to the door of Soviet Russia.

The trade of China means more to Japan than the good-will of most European countries, and even more than the silk trade with the United States, for the farmers who raise the silk can exist otherwise, but the factory workers who get their raw materials from China and sell their finished products there would—one out of every 20 of them, at least—be deprived of their livelihood. These industrial workers, together with the capitalists who own the factories, are behind the present movement in Japan which has retired Gen. Araki and placed the widely-traveled Mr. Hirota in charge of Japan's foreign policy. That policy is now to conciliate the United States and avoid a conflict with Soviet Russia, and to placate China by carrying out something of Theodore Roosevelt's policy of "speaking softly but wielding a big stick."

JAPAN has no deep-laid plans to take the Philippines, seize Singapore or in other than purely commercial ways extend its influence throughout the British, Dutch and French colonies in Asia. We are told that the peoples of these colonies are oppressed and that they would welcome the deliverance which Russia, for example, could offer them, but that they are all mortally afraid of Japanese domination. The Philippine Islands are an economic liability to the United States, and from a dollar-and-cents point of view, the United States will be well rid of them when the legislation just passed by Congress becomes effective in about 12 years. While they represent a large market for American cotton piece goods, they buy them behind a tariff wall at great economic loss to themselves. They could buy Japanese cotton goods much more cheaply.

If the Japanese were to seize the Philippines, they would risk war with the United States, sacrifice a $200,000,000 raw silk export trade, and acquire a dependency which has been found an economic burden. The Filipinos have a lower living standard than the Japanese and this has militated against emigration of Japanese to the islands, except in the Davao district of Mindanao, where a flourishing Japanese colony raises the best hemp produced in the territory.

The Japanese want peace and trade throughout the Malay Archipelago, and this is apparently misunderstood by Downing street. A reason for the misunderstanding can be seen in the fact that Japan has a natural advantage in the manufacture of the coarser grades of cotton piece goods, and is able to sell them in competition with Manchester in this erstwhile British trade preserve. When a nation like England, which depends so much on its overseas trade—and piece goods represent roughly 30 per cent of that trade with India and the Malay Peninsula—finds that trade slipping into the hands of a competitor, hard feelings are bound to result.

The Post Impressionist

The Twelfth Guest.

Postoffice, Monday.

DICK said: "I knew Harry before either of us came to Washington—in New York. He was just like any of the young fellows in brokers' offices—a nice fellow with a few acquaintances, but not many. Perhaps some of them lived on Park avenue or Fifth. If they did, they didn't ask him around much. Anyhow, there wasn't any mystery about him then."

Donovan inquired: "What's the mystery about him in Washington?"

"Why," said Dick, "down here he's all of a sudden become a strong party man. Well, I don't mean a political party man; I mean a social party man. And I don't mean he goes in for the large social affairs. I mean, if he doesn't go to the embassies and Justices' houses and the Senators'—well, he's all the time at a little luncheon or dinner at other people's houses when Ambassadors and Justices and Senators are among the guests. Sounds like one of those old ads to learn Greek by gramaphone, but it's the truth. Come to think of it, I know a couple of fellows who've come here and blossomed out like that."

Said Donovan: "Harry and his lot are Twelfth Guests, that's all."

* * * *

"Is that," asked Dick, "a Washington secret society?"

"It's rather Washington, but it isn't a secret society. It's a boon—a boon to distracted hostesses, an immediate response to the S. O. S. of social navigators in distress.

"In New York, most of the people who have the habit of giving interesting dinners are people who live in big quarters and give big dinners. Everything being on a large scale, one or two guests more or less make no difference.

"But in Washington there are slews of people who live in little houses and yet know slews of people who live in big ones—that's one thing. Another is that here—where diplomats, Justices and Senators are kind of bunched, not to say crowded—they go around more; and they get fed up with the big shows and like the little shows. Then—third thing—you'll notice, when all the leaves are in the little house dining table, its capacity is exactly 12 places."

Dick began: "I don't see——"

"Why," Donovan wearily explained, "Washington is like all political and diplomatic cities. It's a city where there's nothing more unreliable than the acceptance of an invitation. Two Senators give your wife their words-of-honor they'll be at your house for 1:30 luncheon next Monday; she invites her other guests—and, at noon, one Senator's secretary telephones apologies, but something's broken loose in committee. Or two Ministers accept with pleasure your kind invitation to dinner at 8:30 Thursday; you issue your other bids—and, at 7:30 one Minister's country threatens to go Fascist.

"Of course," continued Donovan, "casualties like that are only minor at a big affair, because the bigger the affair the more the stars. But for years there were nowhere on the social earth terrors comparable to those endured by the Washington small-house hostess in the last hours before one of her dinners.

"Very well. You know the human body or mind produces protective processes against certain physical or mental hurts; same way with Washington against this social peril. There just naturally grew up the Unincorporated Association of Eleventh Hour Inviteds—the Protective and Benevolent Order of the Twelfth Guests."

* * * *

Dick said he thought Donovan said it wasn't a secret society. Donovan said:

"I did. And it isn't. But, just the same, it's a sort of order. There are a hundred hostesses in Washington who would call it an Order of Nobility.

"I never saw Harry till this morning, but I can tell you everything that has happened to him since he struck Washington:

"He came here with may be only one letter, but it happened to be to a twelve-place dinner-giver: call her Mrs. X. She had to ask him to dinner. She saw he watched her before he selected a fork, observed he had enough small-talk not to look tiny, found out that he wasn't married or likely to want to be.

"A few days later, just before a dinner of hers, an invited Ambassador had an attack of international incident, or a promised Senator had his State boss drop in on him. So she 'phoned Harry and asked would he mind saving her life, and he wouldn't mind, and he did save it—behaved just as if he'd been invited a week before.

"Then Mrs. X's friend, Mrs. Y gets in the same trouble and all the regular members of the Ancient Honorable Order seem booked. She 'phones Mrs. X, asking whatever is she going to do. Mrs. X recommends Harry—says she's sure he would mind. And she's right.

"After that, the O. K. goes all around. Harry's a third-degree fixture in the Twelfth Guest Lodge."

"That's the way it works with 'em all. I know men who've belonged for years and years. Once a Twelfth Guest always a Twelfth Guest. All you have to do is to behave like a civilized person and to stand ready to dress and eat at a moment's notice. The only cause for expulsion is marriage."

* * * *

"What," asked Dick, "do they do when they get old?"

"Keep on accepting," Donovan replied.

"But what do they do when they're too old for that?" Dick persisted.

"Then?" Oh, then," said Donovan, "they write their memoirs."

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

THERE have been two or three little incidents recently that have caused me to wonder if the professors have an organization like the doctors and lawyers. Of course, I know they have societies through which they get professorial magazines every now and then and go to annual professorial conventions. But I am wondering if they do not have a more closely knit fraternity than this, say something like the Masonic order, by which they can identify themselves to one another by wiggling their fingers or ears and in which they have their little secrets. For one thing, there was Prof. Berle's hasty retraction of a description he had given of Prof. Wirt upon the occasion of the latter's red plot charges. First Prof. Berle was reported as having described his fellow professor as a "gullible old duffer." No sooner had this appeared in print than Prof. Berle said he had been misquoted, that what he had really said was something to the effect that Dr. Wirt was a mistaken youth.

BARGERON.

* * * *

I wondered at the time why Prof. Berle saw fit to withdraw his original description. It was not particularly harsh. Indeed, in the great game of politics into which the professors have entered, it was, as an epithet, comparatively mild. It occurred to me that maybe he realized immediately that he had violated some professorial rule, that it is one of the tenets of some organization they may have that they must not refer to one another as "gullible old duffers," that such an act subjects the offending member to a fine.

I am inclined to lean more to this belief because of what has happened in the matter of Prof. Berle's reference to Postmaster General Farley. He is quoted as having described Jim as "not a particularly brilliant politician." In this day and time when brilliancy has become even more of a fad than bridge I would say that is a pretty hot shot, more serious, certainly, than "gullible old duffer."

Yet Prof. Berle hastily withdraws his reference to Dr. Wirt and permits it to stand as regards Jim. Jim is, of course, not a professor. Dr. Wirt is.

* * * *

The distinction becomes more pronounced, I think, when you recall that when the professors split all over the place on the question of dollar manipulation, they never spoke harshly of one another. Yet Prof. Warren, the former egg and horticulture man, was surely a set-up for fine terminology from opposing professors. They had excellent play for their brilliancy here. But no, the opposing professors never said anything more strongly than that Prof. Warren was pursuing mistaken premises and hypotheses or something of the sort. They may at times have been speaking right strongly about the professor but their epithets were so academic that the rest of us couldn't understand them.

* * * *

It is not improbable, of course, that the professors should have an organization for their mutual protection and advancement, an organization like the lawyers and doctors have, with some sort of a motto, as "We must all hang together or we will hang separately."

The manner in which the professors have descended upon us, in fact, suggested a mass movement, a planning, a deliberate action on the part of the faculty. It must have been a movement of several years' formulation, too. It could hardly have been a case of one professor seeing another down here and deciding he would come also. I am inclined to believe they had a regular mobilization plan already to be carried out with the arrival of Der Tag.

If this is the case it will be fun when the lawyers try to get the Government back out of the hands of the professors.

5,000 Inspect Post Dwelling

"Value of Values," Is Verdict of Throngs at Model Home.

More than 5,000 persons have been delighted by visits to the second Washington Post model home of 1934 at 3902 Benton street northwest, during the three weeks it has been open to the inspection of the public. "A value of values" seems to be the almost unanimous comment of those who view it.

That B. H. Gruver, its builder, has produced a great home value, is evidenced by the acclaim the local public has given it. Hundreds of persons visit this house daily.

The response to the presentation demonstrates that local home lovers have waited years for this new and fine type of house at moderate price.

Built by Mr. Gruver, constructor of hundreds of the city's most excellent homes, this display dwelling is completely furnished by Hutchison, Inc., with draperies by John F. Ligon. It is notable for its electrically equipped kitchen and is referred to as "an electric kitchen health home."

The house will be open for inspection daily until 9 p. m. until further notice. To visit it, drive out Massachusetts avenue to Wisconsin avenue, turn south to Calvert street, west on Calvert street to Thirty-ninth street and south to the home. Another route is out Q street to Thirty-seventh street, north on Thirty-seventh street to Tunlaw road, then north one block to Benton street and west to the house.

Cannon at Jackson Silent on Ouster

Jackson, Miss., April 29 (AP).—Cloaked in silence Bishop James Cannon, jr., arrived here today, three days late, to take up his official duties in the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Shortly before 6 a. m., the bishop stepped from his train from Washington, where he was acquitted Friday in District of Columbia Supreme Court of charges of conspiring to violate the Federal corrupt practices act in the handling of political campaign funds in 1928.

At his hotel Bishop Cannon rested until after noon, refusing to discuss rumors that certain groups in the conference would seek his voluntary retirement from the College of Bishops at this conference, four years before his retirement would be binding under the automatic 72-year retirement rule.

Nudists Given Cold Shoulder In New Laws

Many States Act to Keep Naturists From Colonizing.

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Nudists are going to find the approaching warm weather season anything but balmy so far as law enforcing authorities of the States are concerned, a survey today indicated.

From one end of the country to another, officers are preparing to ban the "go native" cultists, though no State has specifically forbidden their practices.

Two commonwealths—Kentucky and Rhode Island—acted recently to restrict the congregation of nudists, but in most communities reliance is placed on ancient indecent exposure laws or ordinances to bar spread of the doctrine. They grace the statutes books of virtually every State and city.

Kentucky lawmakers nearly thwarted themselves in legislating on nudism. They passed a bill making it unlawful to establish a nudist colony without building a 20-foot wall around it. When the bill was enrolled, a clerk left off the first syllable of the word "unlawful." Gov. Ruby Laffoon signed it without observing the omission. However, the law still requires a special tax, reports on membership and other restrictive provisions. Recent reports, nevertheless, said a colony might be founded near Louisville.

Rhode Island Bill Killed.

The Rhode Island general assembly passed an antinudist bill, but Gov. Theodore F. Green vetoed it because of its phraseology. The bill was corrected in the Senate, but died in a House committee.

Some Colorado nudists tried to incorporate under State law, but were refused a certificate when the Attorney General ruled ordinances forbidding indecent exposure probably would be violated.

Fred C. Ring, proprietor of a Michigan nudist colony, who was convicted of indecent exposure last year, has an appeal pending before the Michigan Supreme Court, but the rumpus caused by a sheriff's raid on his camp fathered no legislation last winter.

Nudist Film Barred.

Two Iowa counties recently barred a motion picture showing nudists at play.

And in the Southland, St. Petersburg, Fla., stopped a blimp from carrying passengers above a city-owned solarium, half of which was use by nude sun bathers who protested the blimp's customers peeking.

Officials in two Oregon counties have frowned on prospective colonies, threatening prosecution on charges of indecent exposure. However, one is scheduled to open in June.

Another colony was established at Wisconsin Dells last week. Others are reported planned in that State, but official action may bar them.

And finally, to the dismay of the nudists, medical authorities have joined in the argument, to some extent, with statements that too much sunshine can be as harmful as too little.

First the Sheriff's A Victim of Thief, 'n Then the Police

Hagerstown, Md., April 29 (Spl.).—Local police, whose squad automobile was stolen last night, were more fortunate than Sheriff W. Bruce Downin, whose lawn mower was stolen the previous night from the Washington County Jail.

The police car disappeared from in front of headquarters last night. Some hours later, Stewart W. Callas, of Baltimore, was captured in the car on the National highway. At a trial today, he was given three months each on charges of unauthorized use of car and speeding.

The lawn mower is still missing.

The Painless House Repairing Drive.

Paint, paper and shingle your way back to prosperity! Is business still slow? Call up Washington about a new roof! Is money scarce? See your Congressman about laying that new floor in the living room!

Is the recovery stalled? Order that leak in the hot-water boiler fixed now! Are jobs still hard to land? Why not throw out those old bathtubs and put in a new set?

* * * *

The next move in the As-We-were campaign is to be a Government. Fix-Up-the-Bungalow drive. The theory is that it would be a wonderful thing for the building industries if we could get all the folks to mend the back porch.

The recovery in the construction trades has been slow and the National Emergency Council is now planning to cause a rush of orders by getting the public to do a little painting or paper-hanging with Government aid.

Choir Festival Starts Tonight

Church Choral Group Will Present Hymn Series This Week.

Six church choirs of Washington will give the first concert of the Choir Festival at 8:30 o'clock tonight, in the First Congregational Church. On Tuesday night six other choirs will present a program in the same auditorium. In Constitution Hall, on Wednesday night, the 12 combined choirs will give the third and concluding concert, in conjunction with 60 members of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Hans Kindler.

At tonight's concert the following numbers will be sung: Epworth Methodist Episcopal Choir (Robert Ruckman, director), Brahms' "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place," and Handel's "Alleluia, Amen;" Mount Pleasant Congregational Choir (Norton M. Little), Andrews' "Discord, 'Neath a Master's Hand," Rogers' "Seek Him Who Maketh the Seven Stars and Orion," and Lucas' "For Lo! the Winter's Past."

St. John's Episcopal Choir (T. Guy Lucas), Tye's "Domini Nowell," Byrd's "Bow Thine Ear," and Palestrina's "Come, Thou Holy Spirit;" Burrell Class Choral Ensemble of Calvary Baptist Church (Florence Howard), Buchanan's "O Mary, When a-Journeying," and Dudley Buck's "Sanctus;" St. Alban's Episcopal Choir (Walter Nash), Balfour's "Evening Hymn," and West's "The Eternal God;" National Baptist Memorial Choir (George F. Ross), two numbers not yet announced.

As a finale, the six choirs will join in singing Noble's "Fierce Was the Wild Billow," and Haydn's "The Heavens Are Telling."

Bullitt Learns Russian, Speaks for Sound Film

Moscow, April 29 (AP).—Ambassador William C. Bullitt today gained positive proof to submit to President Roosevelt that he has kept a promise to study the Russian language.

The American envoy made his first speech in Russian—an address for a Soviet sound film—and exacted the promise from cameramen that they would send the film to Mr. Roosevelt.

Nothing Scatters a Crowd Like a Head Ready to Burst

By Robert Quillen

The new Japanese Ambassador, having lived much of his life in this country, is supposed to understand Americans.

If he does in fact understand them, he should be able to make his government understand why they no longer admire Japan.

Forty years ago, literate Americans looked on the Japanese and all of their works with affectionate admiration.

If their attitude was condescending, it was none the less friendly. They spoke of Japan only in praise. The "little Japs" were cute, polite, charming, clever.

There was no thought of equality or the lack of it. That ugly question does not appear among friends.

When Japan and Russia went to war, Americans sided with Japan—partly because of their affection, partly because Japan was the little fellow—the underdog.

The war changed America's attitude. One can't be condescending to a world power. The "cute little Jap" had become a mighty warrior who might be a menace to any nation:—even America. And Witte, senior Russian plenipotentiary, negotiating the treaty at Portsmouth, struck the shrewdest blow of the war when he said to reporters, smiling to hide his venom: "You Americans have discovered that we are, after all, white men."

But that was not the cause of the change.

Japan was proud of her victory—as she had reason to be. And individual Japanese in America thrust out their chests a little too far. There was more than a hint of pre-war Prussian arrogance. Courtesy's exaggerated humility gave way to swell-head.

Swell-head is the unpardonable sin in America. Let the most popular artist, actor or politician reveal its symptoms and his career is finished. It was Lindbergh's modesty, more than his achievement, that made him an idol.

Whatever the truth may be, Japan's role in China seemed that of a bully. And much talk of "Japanese pride" seemed evidence of the bully's swell-head.

It is a combination that causes Americans considerable pain in the region of the neck.

Nila Cram Cook Sighs for India's Seductive Flutes

New York, April 29 (AP).—Nila Cram Cook, the former disciple of the Mahatma Gandhi, who returned a month ago from India, told an audience today that the lack of romance in America is reflected in its music.

"India is the land of the flute," the former Iowa girl said in a brief talk to 250 students of New York schools of music. "The flute, in the aesthetic sense, is the restorer of love."

The Indian swain, she said, could charm a woman or a snake with equal facility by playing a flute or piccolo. She described jazz as an expression for romantic sentiments.

Miss Cook, who appeared under the auspices of the American Music Students' Creative League, was dressed in native Indian costume.

Asked about her separation from her husband, Albert N. Hutchins, whom she married on March 26, she said:

President to Get His Poppy Today

President Roosevelt at noon today will receive the first Buddy Poppy of the 1934 National buddy poppy sale, conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The presentation will take place at the White House and the poppy will be tendered the Chief Executive by 3-year-old Muriel Morgan, daughter of a former service man, of Eaton Rapids, Mich.

Muriel's father, Clyde A. Morgan, is a patient at a base hospital in Battle Creek, Mich. He served as a machinist and marine engineer in the Navy from 1917 until 1920.

Memorial to Bryan Unveiled Thursday

The Nebraska Society of Washington will hold a reception and dance at the Lee House Wednesday in honor of the unveiling of the William H. Jennings Bryan Memorial on Thursday.

All members of the Nebraska delegation on Capitol Hill have been invited. Senators William Thompson and George W. Norris, of Nebraska, will speak.

Sick Workers Receiving Less Medical Care

New York, April 29 (AP).—Sick working people received 23½ per cent less medical care during 1933 than from 1928 to 1931, the United States Public Health Service and the Milbank Memorial Fund said today in a joint report.

The report was the result of a house-to-house canvass of 6,686 wage-earning families comprising 29,000 individuals residing in Baltimore, Birmingham, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Pittsburgh and Syracuse.

During 1933 physicians' calls to sick working people decreased one-sixth, hospitalization increased 14 per cent, and the amount of free care from hospitals and physicians increased 49 and 15 per cent, respectively.

The families were classified into three groups:

1. "Poor"—Annual incomes averaging less than $150 per person.
2. "Moderate"—Between $150 and $424 per person.
3. "Comfortable"—$425 or more per person.

The results obtained were checked against the findings for families in similar income groups by the committee on the costs of medical care for the period 1928-1931.

This comparison showed these specific facts:

1. Only 52 per cent of the cases of illness received some medical care, either from physicians or hospitals, in 1933, as against 68 per cent in 1928-1931.
2. Hospitalization was given 7.4 per cent of 1933's illnesses, as against 6½ per cent in 1928-1931.
3. Physicians' calls per 1,000 persons were nearly 17 per cent fewer in 1933 than in 1928-1931.
4. Among the "new poor" and "chronic poor" families, 61 per cent of physicians' calls were free.

The Week Abroad

By Andre Vulliet.

Disguising her dangerous imperialism under the milder term "mission," Japan last week issued a manifesto which showed once more her determination to make the most of the indecision, the inertia and lack of coordination of the other Great Powers in their Far East policy.

"Japan is called upon," says the so-called "unofficial" note, "to exert the utmost effort in carrying out her mission and fulfilling her special responsibilities in Eastern Asia."

Such a self-attributed mission, probably finds its justification in the Japanese legend which tells how Jimmu, first Emperor of Japan and son of the Goddess Sun, was ordered by his mother to found an Empire that would cover all that which is under heaven.

Encouraged by the inertia and the fear of complications shown by those who have no mission to fulfil, Japan simply goes ahead, feeling stronger and stronger, until such time as, realizing the danger, the other nations will get together and do something.

Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations in 1932 was a trial balloon. It meant Japan was going to do in Asia as she pleased, regardless of what Europe or the United States might have to say. It sounded bold at the time but it turned out highly profitable to Japan.

* * * *

Why, then, not launch a bigger balloon and see?

Now, what is the reaction of the great powers? Practically non-existent.

Amidst the utmost consternation, all they did was to file requests with the foreign office in Tokyo for official translations of Japan's manifesto. Quite cleverly they were answered that the document was not an official expression of Japan's foreign policy but a statement by Eiji Amau, the Tokyo foreign office spokesman.

In reply, Japan "officially" sent a much milder document, saying "neither in Manchukuo nor in China have we any territorial ambitions. * * * We have no intention to interfere with the interests of third parties * * * but Japan objects to any action whatsoever by other powers that may lead to disturbance of peace and order in east Asia.

"Japan bears the responsibility for maintenance of peace and order in eastern Asia with other Asiatic powers, particularly China."

There was no mention of Japan's "mission" and such a display of "adroit diplomacy" was meant to quiet down the unrest of the white world.

But Japan knows that the United States is hesitant with a navy out of date in many respects; that England shows her traditional disgust for complications and for any action that may mean taking a stand on any question; that France is too preoccupied in Europe to care much about the Far East; that Italy's interest in the Far East is so small that, despite Mussolini's frequent pointing to the yellow peril for the decades to come, she might be interested in becoming the only friend of Japan if such a friendship were repaid by some larger interest in eastern Asia.

It seems reasonably certain, at any event, that, so long as it goes unchallenged, Japan's ambition will continue swelling and swelling and swelling until. . . .

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reischbank, is also trying to make the most of the division prevailing among Germany's private creditors.

The day before the conference opened in Berlin, last week, he bluntly established the three following points:

Continuance of the present payments in foreign exchange was impossible; a reduction in interest rates was not only necessary but morally justified; expansion of Germany's exports was an absolute necessity if the debts were to be paid at all.

Germany's trade balance, favorable two years ago, has been affected gravely by the devaluations of the pound and the dollar, the raising of tariff barriers and the world boycott against German goods. Since it is not in the power of Germany to modify the first two factors she can only try to do something to discard the ill-effects of the last one.

But, rather than deviate by an inch from the National Socialist policy, Dr. Schacht emphasized, Germany will do without exports and cut her imports accordingly, thus severing herself from the rest of the world.

To the rest of the world this will mean giving up sales, the payment of which could only be received in blocked marks. But to Germany, it will probably prove much more harmful since she badly needs raw materials to keep her industry going, especially now when she is preparing for rearmament.

She will have to develop substitutes for her imports and go through the painful process of adapting an overequipped industry with millions of jobless to the capacity of a home market.

This is no longer a problem of production. It is a problem of distribution. And its solution, if any, will call for a drastic lowering of industrial prices, as compared to agricultural prices, a complete supervision of industry by the government and a rigid regimentation of all the economic life of the country.

Thus, through indirect channels, a policy of supernationalism seems to be leading straight to state socialism.

Duke of Gloucester To Visit Australia

London, April 29 (U.P.).—King George V has decided to send his third son, the Duke of Gloucester, to visit Australia in the fall instead of Prince George, youngest son of the British monarch, it was announced today.

It was explained the change was made due to the heavy strain on the prince during his recent South African tour.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

READERS who just aren't going to like Lewis Mumford anyway, and who would as soon have his "Technics and Civilization" in the house as a Fundamentalist would have the works of Robert Ingersoll, may now pass right along to Prof. Phelps or to "Hi" Phillips. For every book which I have read since those 495 pages on man and the machine seems to fall neatly, all wrapped up and ticketed, into some corner of Mr. Mumfords' field. Even Steven Vincent Benet's new novel.

* * * *

"James Shore's Daughter" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50), for all its poeticizations and rather thin and yearning comments on love, is at bottom a picture of paleotechnic life (see Mumford), Power and the mine fill the background. Personalized, brightened up, even romanticized to the usual degreee, these factors can not quite hide an awful human emptiness.

THEO. HALL.

James Shore was a bonanza miner of the Nevada boom. Waxing immensely rich, he brought his daughter Violet to New York, surrounded her with elegance. The "I" of the story, Gareth Grant, expatriate son of an expatriate painter and his writing wife, met her there as a child and fell in love with her. But between the poor youngster, reared in the disastrous fashion of expected genius, and the daughter of such wealth, there could, of course, be nothing permanent. Nothing, that is, save a nostalgic and increasingly unreal love. When they met later in Europe at the nubile age and the romance balanced delicately, James Shore saw to it that Gareth was removed from the scene. Violet married one of the New England names.

Time and again Violet and Gareth met in after life. Gareth was growing well-to-do himself as a dealer in art. Violet, feeling all the love of power which had moved her father, could use it only in combating her husband's family or in playing at social tactics in New York. Once when they met they tried rather desperately to snatch at what might have been—they found they were holding only dreams and images. Even the old life of plenty and power, the upper side of the paleotechnic era, Gareth saw fading.

There ought to be a law to prevent an author from writing too much. Mr. Benet I'm afraid, didn't need to write this novel. Lovely passages abound; the compressed poetic wit shows itself on almost every page. So very beautiful and appealing are some of the earlier New York and Continental scenes that I am inclined to think personal homesickness for youth provided Mr. Benet with his chief motive. Many novels have sprouted from that soil, to be sure, and flourished well. Yet the time for such is slipping over the horizon, along with their themes. We begin to ask, once in a while, that a novel be grown-up in conception, be in the best sense of the word contemporary. I can not find this in Mr. Benet's. The way he touches the phenomena of money or power (I should not say this at all unless he had brought up the subject) springs largely from the past, not the present. It is to that degree unusuable now.

Latest of nonfiction band wagons is the topic of munitions makers as two-faced fomenters of war. "Merchants of Death" was reviewed by Raymond Clapper in yesterday's magazine section. You might also like to read George Seldes' "Iron, Blood, and Profits" (Harper, $2.50), in which the author of "You Can't Print That" and the recent "The Vatican" goes over the same field with considerably more heat. For a shorter improvisation on this tune, I recommend the little pamphlet which Doubleday Doran have made for 10 cents, less than cost, of an article by the editors of Fortune which attracted wide notice in that magazine. "Arms and Men" gives the pith of the above two books, eloquently and memorably.

* * * *

Turning to Russia, an unambitious and hence sound little book has come in—"Industrial Russia" (Chemical Catalog Co., New York, $3). In its pages Alcan Hirsch, Ph. D., an American chemical engineer who held a high place in the Soviets as adviser, tells of Russia's progress and needs in various broad industrial fields. The business man looking toward Russia with an eye to trade will find it highly informative and practical. Plain facts are given, with a minimum of critical interpretation.

What the book shows with sufficient clarity is that Russia, for all its changes in social structure, still perpetuates certain incongruous hangovers of that same paleotechnic era—notably the crowding of industrial centers.

Mr. Mumford pointed that out. I guess there's nothing for you to do but read "Technics and Civilization" in self-defense.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

An Anthology of Sport.

There are so many kinds of anthologies it is rather surprising we have had to wait so long for a collection of articles and stories and comments on athletic sport. But this volume that has finally appeared was well worth waiting for; it is called "The Sporting Gesture" and is edited and in part written by Thomas L. Stix.

It is probable that more than 50 per cent of male readers, when they take up a newspaper, turn first of all to the sporting page. And apart from the almost universal excitement over athletics, there is this to recommend the sport news: The front page of every newspaper is a record of defeat and tragedy and crime. The sports page is a record of victories.

Furthermore, with the tremendous interest in athletics which is now characteristic of every country in the world, the journalists who write the daily articles on sports are in many cases literary experts, whose essays make good reading because they are so well written.

Now, in Mr. Stix's book the thing emphasized is the Sporting Gesture. Athletics can be a means of grace, a development not only of skill and courage, but of honor and self-sacrifice, or they can be a means of degradation. As Mr. Stix says, "It is the gesture that counts. It is the gesture that those who love the game as a game like best. At such times a victory means little and the gesture everything."

In this anthology, therefore, we have short stories by Owen Johnson, Charles E. Van Loan, John R. Tunis, Jack London, Gouverneur Morris, Alfred Ollivant, John Galsworthy, Lieut. Rucker—and they are all very much to the point.

But the one that impresses me the most and the one that I am certain readers will never forget is the shortest in the whole book; only a little over two pages. It is by Mr. Stix himself. It is called "A Gentleman and an Officer." It is such an amazing story that it seems incredible, but we are assured by the author that it is true.

In the midst of the war and in No Man's Land, between the American and the German trenches, and within the sight of both sides, a German officer took off the iron cross he was wearing and pinned it on the breast of his American enemy.

If you want to know why he did this, read the story.

League of Builders Assembles Today

Status of Industry Under NRA to Be Studied.

The Construction League of the United States begins a two-day session today at the Willard Hotel to review the industry's position under the NRA and to confer upon means for reviving construction.

Alonzo J. Hammond, Chicago consulting engineer, will preside over the group of 70 delegates from 20 National associations, representing architects, engineers, general contractors, subcontractors, material producers and distributors. This general assembly is expected to lay plans for an intensive drive to revive construction by stimulating private and public activities.

With the construction industry code approved, the league will push public works and legislation to assist financing of private construction, both in home building and in commercial and industrial lines.

Labor to Meet Fisher Officials

Conference Today to Take Up Controversies in Seven Cities.

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—American Federation of Labor leaders in Detroit announced today that a conference had been arranged for tomorrow between union officials and representatives of the Fisher Body Corporation, about whose factories labor disputes are either in progress or impending in seven cities.

The union officials negotiated for the conference through Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the National Automobile Labor Board, and it is planned to hold the conference at the board's offices. Principal among the issues to be studied at the conference will be those involved in the strike in the Fisher factories at Cleveland, considered by union leaders to be the key to the entire situation.

The plan for Monday's conference was announced a few hours after the executive committee of Cleveland Local 18614, of the A. F. of L., conferred with the labor board at Detroit. This conference was in session until 2 a. m. today, but no announcement was forthcoming as to what progress, if any, was made.

The factories expected to be represented either directly or by proxy in tomorrow's conference include those at Cleveland, Atlanta, Kansas City, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Flint, Pontiac and Lansing, Mich., and Janesville, Wis.

'King Horse' Coronation On May 10

Society, Used to Machine Age, Will Revert to Tanbark.

Mechanical Animal to Be Replaced by Coach and Four.

For a score of years the world has been entirely machine-minded. In business every thought is of whirring wheels and humming belts, and even in leisure time the machine holds sway. Every one attends social functions, arriving in sleek, shining motors. Going to golf or tennis the would-be exerciser travels in comfort in a car.

The only sport left to cry its challenge to engines and petrol is horseback riding, and at one time it had a precarious foothold on popularity, when members of society and leading figures all over the world took up mechanical horses.

However, the law of gravitation and sane living compels the "pendulum" to swing once again in the direction from which only a few years ago, it swung in defiance and haste.

Each year, as spring returns and the bridle paths beckon, various equine enthusiasts declare King Horse is not satisfied with merely being the center of attention at races and at shows, which are months apart, but that he will have his day yet.

From the far West comes word that would seem to substantiate this and announces that old Dobbin and Nellie are coming back at a gallop.

Not only does society turn its attention to blooded horses of Kentucky and Arabian steeds, but it takes a keen interest in the "forgotten animal," the Western pony. The debutantes and members of the younger set are not satisfied with low-slung, soft-purring roadsters, but choose for their conveyances smart phaetons and traps drawn by bright little "pinto ponies" to carry them to and from their engagements.

The first thing on Washington's horse calendar is the National Capital Horse Show, which will be held at Bradley Farms, May 10, 11 and 12. The show, in previous years, has opened in the afternoons, but this year it will open in the mornings, thereby giving entire days to the exhibition of skilled riding and thoroughbred horses.

According to the sponsors, the demand for boxes indicates two things: First, a sell-out before the opening day, and second, that King Horse is at last coming into his own.

Leaders of Washington society are well represented in the list of boxholders, including the new dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Rumania, Charles Davila; Senator and Mrs. David A. Reed, Senator and Mrs. W. Peirce Guild Party Friday Aids Charity Organization Starts Work Where Fund Stops.

The May Party to be given by the Peirce Guild on Friday at the Washington Home for Foundlings bids fair to bring together many interested in this well known charity. The Peirce Guild was organized in 1892 and four of the charter members, Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly, Mrs. Aldis B. Browne, Mrs. James M. Green and Mrs. John C. Pennie, are still active in the organization. Prior to the home becoming an agency of the Community Chest, the Guild supplied all the beds, bedding and clothing for the hundreds of children cared for in the institution for almost 40 years. Now the Guild adds greatly to the comforts of the children by furnishing things not provided for in the Chest budget.

Starting at 2 o'clock there will be tables for cards. Aprons, homemade candies and cookies will be for sale. From 4 to 6 tea will be served and at 5 o'clock the children, ranging from 3 to 6 years of age, will be seen having their suppers.

The guests will be received by Mrs. Wendell P. Stafford, Mrs. Josiah A. Van Orsdel, Mrs. Simon Wolf and Mrs. Cloyd H. Marvin.

Professional Women Hold Dinner Tuesday

The Business and Professional Women will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. for their regular monthly dinner in their clubroom on the fourth floor of the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets. Dr. Harold C. Bryant, assistant director, National Park Service, will speak on, "Our Birds, Flowers and Trees." Reservations must be made by Monday evening.

MME. DE LABOULAYE, wife of the Ambassador of France, with the French doll which she has contributed to the May Day fair to be given tomorrow by the Newspaper Women's Club. Mme. de Laboulaye plans to attend the carnival.

Press Women To Entertain At Gala Party

Cabinet Members' Wives Will Be Guests at Benefit Event.

A Cabinet tea party will be entertained at the "over-the-tea booth" tomorrow afternoon at the gala May Day carnival to be held by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington in the auditorium of the National Press Club for the benefit of the milk fund for undernourished children and to establish a fellowship fund for the club.

Among those enjoying the "tea party" will be Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The ballroom of the club is being gaily decorated with cherry blossoms and other artistic festoons indicative of the spectacular colorfulness of a carnival scene. The blossoms have been loaned by Miss Sybil Baker, director of the District Playgrounds, who has also loaned a miniature "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," which will be used in the doll booth.

Mr. Buddy Barrett, interior decorator, is arranging all the booths in attractive and artistics settings, and posters of all sorts are being made and contributed by pupils of the Abbot School of Applied Arts.

The doors will be opened to all comers, though precautions have been taken to prevent overcrowding of the auditorium at any time.

Features of the fair of especial interest to the very young members of society during the afternoon hours will be several entertainers from the Johnny Jones Circus, including a clown.

Mme. Hudespeth, a mind reader, who several years ago predicted the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt to the office of President of the United States, a fortune-telling dog, the weight-guessing genius, a dart wheel, an illusion box and bingo equipment have all been secured through the courtesy of Mr. Lawrence Phillips, manager of the Jones show. Mr. Phillips is also lending several old-fashioned carnival cashier cages to be used at the entrances to the fair.

Miss Lora Kelly will be in charge of the bingo entertainment, with Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris of the Minneapolis Star, Miss Katherine Pearson and Miss Roberta Bradshaw as assistants. Miss Grace McGerr, of the Nebraska State Journal is to be in charge of the dart wheel, and Miss Margaret Blackistone will be in charge of the weight-guessing stunt.

Large urns will be kept supplied with fresh hot coffee at the booth of Mrs. E. A. Harriman by the Wilkins Coffee House, and Mr. Julius Reiners, manager of the National Press Club, who is assisting the general chairman of the fair, will be on hand to render service wherever needed.

The Harris & Ewing, Underwood & Underwood, Bachrach and Hessler-Henderson studios have furnished splendid photographs of the President and of Mrs. Roosevelt, which will be on sale. They have also extended a number of other photographic courtesies to the club for the May Day Fair.

Among the late arrivals for the books stall are two copies of "Argonaut," by Honore Morrow. They have been autographed by Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, socially prominent in Washington, who is the heroine of the story. Donations to other features of the fair have been received within the past few hours from Mrs. Burnett, wife of Col. Charles Burnett, Miss Leila Mechlin, Miss Daisy Prentice, Mrs. George Pender Hart, Mrs. Ben M. McKelway, Mrs. S. A. Kimberly, Mrs. Ralph MacDowell and Mrs. Dick Kincheloe Ingley.

Prominent Women To Attend Dinner

They'll Be Entertained By Women Veterans.

Others who have accepted invitations are Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, and Kathryn O'Loughlin McCarthy, of Kansas.

The purpose of the dinner, Miss Frooks announced, is to honor the women in the Senate and House of Representatives as symbolic of the service performed by women in a "man's game"—the World War.

Washingtonian Wed In Ellicott City, Md.

Miss Marion Cook Bride Of Mr. J. L. Manheim.

The wedding of Miss Marion Williams Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sterling Cook, of Ellicott City, Md., to Mr. Joseph L. Manheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Manheim, of Washington, took place Saturday afternoon in Ellicott City.

The Rev. Stewart, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a smart ensemble of brown with a hat and accessories of the same shade.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Manheim will make their home at 4800 Davenport street, Washington.

Alexandria Homes Duplicate Traditions of Europe's Castles

Colonial Houses Toured Under Rector's Aid Group Auspices.

One special promise in the minds of most of those who travel in England or on the Continent is that of visiting all the old castles.

There is something about an old, old place that is fascinating and awe inspiring. This country is unable to boast of grand old moss-bedecked castles, standing alone, staring blindly with their empty windows, but does have lovely colonial homes to show. These residences seem to breathe welcome to all who enter their quaint gardens and view their handsome interiors.

The historic old town of Alexandria on the Potomac River has a wealth of famous houses and each spring there is a tour of them under the auspices of the Rector's Aid Society of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Home of Lee.

One of the homes visited is that on Oronoco street, where Robert E. Lee came to live at the death of his father, Gen. Henry (Light Horse Harry) Lee. Oronoco street was then known as "The Rolling Road" down which the planters rolled their tobacco to the Government warehouses, located at the foot of the street. Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Sayres now make their home in the old house.

The next home on the list is on Alfred street and belongs to Senator and Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, the latter known in the writing world as Frances Parkinnson Keyes. This charming old place seems to reflect the personalities of the two people, each so distinguished in their different fields of work.

On South Washington street there is a quaint little house, built a century and a half ago in a design which is found among the oldest buildings in Virginia. It was once the home of a famous Quaker silversmith, Mordicai Miller, and is now the residence of Mrs. Hubert Snowden.

Address by Lafayette.

In 1824, Gen Lafayette made an address to the people of Alexandria from the steps of the home of Benjamin Delaney on Duke street. This lovely old sample of colonial architecture was built in 1795 and is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Horner. On Prince street is an old Revolutionary period home that has been carefully restored and suitably refurnished with early American antiques by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin George.

Four generations of the Leadbetter family have occupied the house at 213 South Pitt street, and in the old-fashioned garden there are 18 plants that have been growing there for almost 100 years. Maj. and Mrs. Charles Barrett are the present owners. Across the street there is St. Paul's Church, which was erected in 1817. Its interior is patterned after that of St. James' Church, Picadilly, London, of which Sir Christopher Wren was the architect.

The mellowed paneling and lovely antiques in these homes with their bright, picturesque gardens have a way of taking the visitors out of the hurry and bustle of the present day back to the delightful yesterdays of Colonial times.

Eleanor Roosevelt In Red Cross Fete

Will Be Among Models at Hospital Style Show.

Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, with several of her friends will model the costumes in the Fashion Show to be given at the Walter Reed Hospital May 8 by the Gray Ladies of the Volunteer Service of the Red Cross in celebration of the sixteenth year of their service and as a benefit for the Memorial Chapel fund.

The full amount necessary for the building of the chapel was pledged before the ground was broken, but because of the depression some of the most generous contributors have been unable to meet their pledges. The result is that a small deficit remains.

Those who wish to play bridge may do so in the Red Cross House at 2:30 o'clock. The Fashion Show will be given in the garden at 4:30 o'clock and tea will be served. The Army Band will play throughout the afternoon.

Anna Worthington To Marry in June

Mrs. Joseph Muse Worthington, of Annapolis, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Anna Fitzhugh Worthington, to Phillips Lee Goldsborough, of Baltimore.

Miss Worthington is a graduate of the Hannah Muse Academy and Barnard College, Columbia University, New York. She is the daughter of the late Dr. Joseph Muse Worthington, of Annapolis, and is the sister of Ellicott Worthington, of Baltimore.

Mr. Goldsborough is the son of the late Dr. Martin Worthington Goldsborough and Mrs. Goldsborough, of Cambridge, Md. He was graduated from St. John's College, Annapolis, and is a member of the Baltimore Bachelors Cotillion.

The wedding will take place in June.

Catholic Clubs to Open Convention on May 12

The Middle Atlantic Province of the Federation of College Catholic Clubs will hold its annual convention May 12 and 13 here. Representatives of 17 clubs will attend. The delegates will arrive Saturday afternoon and be met by the George Washington Newmanites. A formal prom in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel is scheduled for the evening.

Sunday morning the entire body will attend the 9 o'clock mass and receive communion at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Breakfast in the garden room of the Mayflower Hotel will follow at 10:15 a. m.

A business meeting will be held at 2 p. m. at the Lambie House on George Washington campus. Immediately following there will be an informal reception and tea.

Epiphany Church Group Plans Dinner Thursday

The Women's Auxiliaries of the Church of the Epiphany will give a dinner in the Parish Hall Thursday, from 5 to 7 o'clock for the benefit of the "Z. B. Phillips Foundation." The goal of this foundation is the endowment of a private room in a local hospital for the benefit of nonpaying patients.

Hostesses on Thursday evening will be Mrs. Harry Hurtt, Mrs. Richard W. Hynson, Mrs. Z. B. Phillips, Miss Mary Wheeler, Mrs. Henry Cooke and Mrs. Russell J. Borbeck.

Stratford Hall Store Festival Set Saturday

31 States Will Contribute Articles for Benefit of Patriotic Cause.

Many prominent Washington and Baltimore people will attend the official opening of the Stratford Store at Stratford Hall, Westmoreland County, Va., birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee, which will take place Saturday. It will be an all-day festival and will serve as a prelude to the fourth annual spring celebration Sunday afternoon.

Gen. B. F. Cheatham, United States Army, (retired), superintendent at Stratford, has assisted Mrs. Cazenove Lee, chairman of the store committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., in arranging an original program for the occasion.

For the Plantation Fair, which will be in progress throughout the day the display of saleable articles will be contributed by the 31 States under the Lee Foundation.

The Stratford exhibits, to be shown in the mansion, comprise the architect's plans and drawings for the renovation and restoration of this old Colonial home; fragments of pottery and glass found in the excavations of the gardens, including the piece of queensware mentioned in the 1778 Inventory of Philip Ludwell Lee, which was the basis of selection for the Stratford Hall Plates, and an attractive arrangement of eighteenth century linen, silver, china and flowers.

Another feature of the day will be the luncheon served in the long room under the great hall by the Westmoreland County committee of the Lee Foundation. A delightful number will be the program of old English folk dances, closing with the Maypole Dance on the north lawn, by a group of young people from Fredericksburg, under the supervision of Mrs. Marion Willis.

In the store which is located in the old kitchen will be displayed all of the various farm products now sold at Stratford, and souvenirs, photos, books, postcards, the Stratford Plates by Wedgwood and the playing cards. Christmas orders also will be taken for delicious Stratford fruit cakes and plum puddings, for holly and for Christmas cards.

Assisting Mrs. Lee in the store business will be sales chairmen from the various States under the Foundation.

Engineer and Mother Advocate Efficiency Basis for Living.

Dr. Lillian Gilbreth Says This Is Her Formula for Success.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

THE WOMAN who desires a full, successful life must begin with a thorough analysis of herself and her job, and then live in such a way that each minute will be valuable.

Thus did Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, famous consulting engineer, mother of 11 children, and active worker in the Girl Scout National Council, yesterday explain her formula for success. Dr. Gilbreth came to Washington to attend the inauguration of Better Homes Week at the Girl Scout Little House.

Slim and straight, with direct blue eyes and a gentle mouth, Dr. Gilbreth looks amazingly young to have done so many things so very well.

"You can see how important this matter of analysis is when you consider efficiency," she said. "Some persons were born to be efficient, and some weren't. When persons are naturally not efficient, and try to be, they probably lose more in nervous strain and fatigue than they gain.

Efficiency Works Everywhere.

"The person who runs things on an efficiency basis is the one who has learned to delegate responsibility to others," she continued. "And this works in business, homes and schools."

When asked if women did not often waste time on little details, Dr. Gilbreth replied:

"There again analysis is important. It depends on the job. The woman who is hired to do detail work is neglecting her job if she concentrates only on the big things. The same thing applies to the business woman's leisure time. Some women get pleasure out of puttering around the house, others like to do bigger things. Each should do the thing that suits her temperament."

Dr. Gilbreth said she first became interested in Girl Scout work because she saw so many women who did not know how to use their leisure or how to relax when they were not working.

Scouts Have Interests.

"I felt this was because they were trained in these things when they were younger," she said. "I think in Girl Scout work a girl acquires a variety of interests that will stay with her all her life.

"Work is not a calamity, it is a blessing. And leisure time, when properly used, can renew one's energies and enthusiasms for the task ahead. These are the things young girls need to learn."

Dr. Gilbreth then outlined essentials for a well-rounded life. These included mental alertness, physical adequacy, emotional control and social adequacy.

Dr. Gilbreth has been a member of the National executive committee of the Girl Scouts since 1930. She is an honorary member of the Society of Industrial Engineers and the American Management Association.

Even the Right Footwear Helps In Homemaking

Atmosphere Determined by Many Factors, Says Home Economist.

THE PERSONALITY of the homemaker determines the atmosphere of the home. And the happy homes are those run by efficient people who are mentally alert, physically healthy and appreciative of beauty. That is, according to Miss Mary Rokahr, extension economist in home management in the Department of Agriculture.

Miss Rokahr produced a chart called the measuring stick, prepared by Miss Viola C. Meintz, extension economist in North Dakota. By use of this a housewife may check up on herself. And it plainly shows that everything from the right kind of shoes to appreciating good music helps in homemaking.

There is that matter of character. The housewife needs to be tolerant, tactful, courageous, attractive in appearance, cooperative, and possessed of a good speaking voice.

In checking up on health, it is revealed good posture and regular health habits will do much to improve the efficiency rating in the home, and the woman who is constantly worrying can never hope for a harmonious household.

Initiative and mental forwardness in civic affairs make home life more interesting, Miss Rokahr pointed out. She showed a letter from a farm woman in Kansas which proved how application of the principles in the chart had changed her whole outlook.

"The very difference in viewpoint brought back my self-respect and put hope into my discouraged mind," this woman wrote.

"When we had beautified the house and had arranged things so work could be done without so much drudgery, I went to work on my personal characteristics. I learned that standing correctly I did not get tired, that dressing appropriately and neatly helped my self-respect and gave me self-confidence.

"Then I learned to play, to appreciate music and books, the beauty of the outdoors. Through these activities the interests of my family have been centralized in the home, our love for the land has increased.

Supermen Are In the Offing

Professor Says That Correct Breathing Prolongs Life to 200 Years.

Nice, France, April 29 (AP).—Immediate active membership in a new race of supermen, living 200 years, was offered to the world today by Prof. E. H. Baker, former research worker of the University of Chicago.

It's all done by proper breathing, Prof. Baker explained.

Prof. Boker, now 75, but looking 40, has made his life work the development of a super-race. He is on a world tour, taking chest measurements of old people in all countries.

"A man can live to be 200 or more," he said, "and can be a Don Juan if he lives right up to the time of his death.

"People die young and get old because they breathe wrong. The heart is good for hundreds of years, and so are the other vital organs.

Stamp Expert Will Discourse To Pen Women

Girl Scout Leisure Time Exhibit to Continue Three Days.

ALBERT F. KUNZE, president of the Washington Stamp Club of the Air, will speak on "Women of Note as Reflected on Postage Stamps" before the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women at 9 o'clock tonight in the studio at 1706 L street northwest.

Honor guests will be Mrs. W. E. Ochiltree, National president of the American War Mothers; Mrs. Howard C. Boone, first vice president, and Mrs. H. H. McCleur, honorary member of the league.

Dr. Frances Moon Butts, president, assisted by Mrs. Hanna Hadley, first vice president, will preside.

Exhibit to Continue.

THE Girl Scouts exhibition of "Leisure Time Activities" in celebration of American National Better Homes Week will continue today, tomorrow and Wednesday at the National Little House, Eighteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

Members of the District of Columbia Council will be the hostesses.

Delphians to Meet.

IVA M. MENEFEE will speak on "The Triumph of the West" at the meeting of the Delphian Chapter of Theta Tau Zeta today at the Army and Navy Hotel.

Other speakers will be: Edith B. Aldridge and Barbara A. Sutter on "Social Customs in Solon's Athens;" Loduth La Raw and Estelle Anthony, "Solon's Career;" Katheryn M. Doherty and Mrs. Francis X. Johnson, "The Persians and Their Civilizations;" Gladys Farrington and Lucy C. Omohundro, "The Repulse of Persia;" Mrs. Lewis Deschler and Mrs. Frank V. N. Cook, "Social Conditions in the Halcyon Interlude;" M. Lillian Bostick and Gertrude Upton, "War Heroes and Statesmen;" Mary C. Williams and Mrs. George H. Markley, "Related Trains of Thought."

New members elected in the Takoma Park Women's Club at the April meeting will be introduced to the executive board at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. C. Merrill, 811 Carroll avenue.

The new members are: Mrs. Albert L. Morgan, Mrs. Oscar T. Wright, Mrs. Vernon F. Auld, Mrs. Nellie Harrison, and Mrs. John L. Huntington.

Dr. George Curtis Peck, traveler and lecturer, will speak on "The Land of Promise" at the luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Election of officers will be the important business of the meeting of the National University Alumnae at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the school building, 818 Thirteenth street northwest.

The drama section of the Women's City Club will hold its annual dinner at 6:30 o'clock today at 736 Jackson place northwest. Miss Catherine L. Vaux, chairman, announces the feature of the evening will be a new play by members of the unit.

Dr. Lothrop Stoddard, author, will speak on "Basic Factors in the German Situation" at the tea of the Washington branch of the University Women at 4 o'clock today at the clubhouse. Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt will be hostess.

The drama section of the Chevy Chase Women's Club will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the Chevy Chase Public Library. Mrs. Robert H. Rice will be in charge of the program.

Bad Management.

Cunning rosy-winged Cupid,
Sometimes you're a little stupid
For your shooting, though intrepid,
Leaves in me a glow that's tepid,
While a gentleman, undaunted
Offers me a love unwanted.
So there'll be no more disputing,
Cupid, let me do the shooting!

A WOMAN'S DEVOTION to science is exemplified in the career of Miss Alice C. Evans, senior bacteriologist with the National Institute of Health, who, in her discovery of the germ of undulant fever, herself contracted the dread disease. Miss Evans' discovery greatly facilitated treatment of the disease and aided in its prevention.

Apartment House Life Offers Plenty of Gossip

By Evelyn Voss Wise.

APARTMENT HOUSES have a life of their own . . . a small world quite isolated, like a little town. One may not have a speaking acquaintance with one's neighbors or any one in the house, but unsolicited information is thrust on one from the paper hanger, the janitor, and particularly by the maids who exchange news in the laundry room or out in front with the children.

My own apartment house has been alive this week with several exciting events.

In the first place Harriet's baby finally arrived. That is always a source of interest for the maids on up. We, her friends, had a bad two days, for every few hours, some one called the hospital and then the round robin began. I called Helen, Helen called Jane, Jane called Em, Em called Grace, and so on, until the babe finally arrived, bless his heart, and we could go back to the routines which his advent interrupted.

Eleanor Jane had a peculiar accident and stopped in to tell me about it this morning. She is six years old and does much toward keeping our little world from getting into a rut. This morning she awakened, she said, jumped out of bed, and slipped out of her pajamas. Hearing no sound, she ran out to see what her mother was doing. No mother, no dog Winks, anywhere. She thrust her head out of the hall door and peered around, then tiptoed cautiously out where she could see the full length of the corridor and the elevator at the end.

Bang! The door slammed shut!

So Embarrassed!

She had no key and said she'd never been so embarrassed in her life. Mr. Goodykuntz, whom she hates, came by and glared at her over his thick rimmed glasses. He mumbled "quaint child" as he passed, and that Eleanor Jane resented. It was half an hour before her mother returned from the store and assumed that "beyond surprise" look when she saw her nude child curled in a ball before the door.

"I guess you won't do that again," she said and Eleanor Jane answered indeed she wouldn't, the tile floor was too durn cold.

My maid tells me there was considerable excitement over the fact that Miss Jones had three new fur coats this winter and no one could discover by stealth or clever questioning who was buying them. Now the secret is out and some of the busybodies are chagrined and some disappointed, but the house seethed with curiosity until today. For a week an elderly gentleman has been driving up in a limousine to escort Miss Jones to breakfast, lunch, and dinner. He was the man, the gossips said, who was buying her clothes. They were right . . . but to their distress he proved to be unquestionably her father.

So Very Icy.

We have several bachelor apartments and the mother of one young man was paying him a visit. She said she was in the bath tub when she heard a key turning in the outside door. The manager had seen the young man depart and knowing he was leaving within the next few weeks, took this opportunity for showing the rooms. The boy's mother jumped out of the tub and darted for a robe, but was too late. She heard an icy remark before the door slammed shut . . . "I understood you to say 'bachelor apartment.'" Fortunately for him, he is leaving town.

It was interesting to stumble across a scrap-book belonging to Miss Mary Cryder, of this city, in which an item sent from Washington special to the Indianapolis News and printed therein December 10, 1904, said:

"Mrs. Roosevelt (meaning Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who was wife to the first Roosevelt, then in the White House) dressed and presented a doll for the Cooperative Society for its annual sale and fair, which took place here on Thursday. The society is a fashionable charity organization which finds a market for the goods made by deserving women. The doll was gowned in a muslin frock made 'Mother Hubbard' style, and very daintily trimmed with lace. The work was all done by hand by Mrs. Roosevelt."

Fisherwomen Warn Men Off

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Fishing stories about the women who screamed at the poor little worm have gone into the discard. Women anglers now have a trout stream of their own, and a woman warden who warns off all encroaching males.

Armed with pistol and badge, and uniformed, Miss Edith Stoeher patrols 3 miles of the Connecticut stream dignified by the name of the Branford River. She is empowered to order all men away. When not actively engaged in her duties she lives in the log cabin lodge used by the women who fish the stream.

Though the trout season just opened this month, it has been found by licenses taken out the number of women fishing in this vicinity has grown greatly since the start last year of this exclusive type of fishing.

A series of women turned out for the position of warden last spring, when it was decided to set apart the stream for women. Miss Stoeher won her post through being judged best in casting by judges of both sexes, whatever bearing that has on being a warden.

WHEN THREE MILES of Bradford River, in Connecticut, was set aside for women anglers, Miss Edith Stoeher (above) was named warden. Armed with pistol and badge, and uniformed, she is empowered to order all men away. She got the job because of her casting prowess—whatever that has to do with being a game warden.

Undeterred, She Devotes Time to Further Bacteriological Study

Alcie C. Evans in 1923 Startled World With Classification of Undulant Fever from Which She's Never Fully Recovered—"All in the Day's Work."

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

SPARRING WITH DEATH so others might live! To this noble end has the career of Miss Alice C. Evans, senior bacteriologist with the National Institute of Health, been dedicated.

Miss Evans' causal discovery of Undulant, or Mediterranean Fever, rocked the scientific world in 1923. Presenting humanity with a key to safeguarding its health against a dread disease, she lost her own for all time by succumbing to it.

Caught It Herself.

Lack of health, however, has not deterred this courageous scientist from forging ahead in her chosen field. Becoming infected by Mediterranean fever germs she was studying ten years ago, she has never fully recovered from the strange, recurring disease. It has returned, like a specter, to cloud her dreams and waggle a finger in the face of her achievements.

There is, however, nothing of the martyr about Miss Evans. The cause of her illness is one thing she will not discuss. It was her associates at the institute who told of her sacrifice.

Pressed for more data, she smiled and dismissed the question.

"That was nothing. It is all in a day's work. Scientists expect those things."

But her associates consider her ten-year single-handed fight against such odds unusual, even in a scientist. They remember her valiant battle against the slow, debilitating waves of pain that characterize this peculiar fever. They remember that in spite of it she has gone ahead unflinchingly along the progressive path of science.

Before Miss Evans' discovery of undulant fever as a distinct entity, it was diagnosed and treated as typhoid or other fevers.

Studying Streptococci.

Now it is the classification of streptococci that consumes her time and energy. This is the bacterium found in scarlet fever, erysipelas, childbirth fever and septic sore throats. It may take years to find out what she is after. When she discovers it, she will pass calmly, inauspiciously on to the next problem. For that's the way of the scientist.

But what are the effects of Miss Evans' undulant fever discovery? The rigid tightening up on milk pasteurization by health officers the country over is one. For it is through raw milk the germs of this insidious disease are most easily conveyed.

A more definite understanding of the disease is another. Diagnosed and treated as "slow typhoid" or malaria cases, many undulant fever patients died in the past.

"In the future," says Miss Evans, "if there seems to be an increasing number of cases, it will be only because those, heretofore confused, will be classified correctly as undulant fever."

Blooded goats, imported from the Mediterranean, first brought the disease into the United States. Perfectly healthy themselves, their milk was found to carry the bacteria of the fever, prevalent in their native country.

The slow fever spread from the southwestern part of the United States, where the goats were purchased, to other sections of the country. At the same time, a peculiar disease, known as "contagious abortion" or Bang's disease, existed in cattle.

Bacteriologists the world over had attempted for years to connect Bang's bacillus with the bacillus which through goats' milk caused the Mediterranean fever in man.

Wins Her Point.

After years of study on the part of the most eminent scientists, the conclusion was reached that the Bang germ and the Mediterranean fever were different organisms. It took America's Alice Evans to demonstrate the germs were twin brothers. She proved, in spite of their slight difference in microscopic contour, they could and did produce the same disease—Undulant Fever.

Was it a hunch? It was more than that. She had thought often about the "slow fever" in man that doctors had been in the habit of calling typhoid. She had worked in the Bureau of Animal Industry for several years on the bacteriology of milk. Her mind speculated upon the two milk organisms. She decided to study them intensively, thoroughly.

Then came an interruption—the War. She was transferred by the Public Health Service to it's hygienic laboratory, to do "her bit." She undertook a program connected with serums, antitoxins and analogous products, used by the overseas forces.

Hostilities ended, she went back to the problems that intrigued her—the study of the two milk organisms. Going about the thing systematically, she collected strains of the organisms from all over the world. In her tests, she found the two germs are indistinguishable by ordinary bacteriological methods. Their differences are detected only by the use of complicated and tedious test.

This gave her the clew. She discovered the Bang germ in cows, and the Mediterranean goat milk germ produced undulant fever.

Immediately her observations were confirmed excitedly by research experts the world over. Her discovery was pronounced one of the most outstanding in the field of medical science during the past quarter of a century.

But Miss Evans did not rest back on her laurels. Incapacitated for months by the first big attack of the fever she contracted, she came quietly back to her laboratory and took up the next scientific problem awaiting her.

Farm, Garden Group to Hold Meeting Here

Promotes Understanding Between Rural and City Women.

"AT THE sign of the spade and the distaff," the insignia of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, will be in vogue at the Dodge Hotel for the next three days while the annual meeting of the organization is being held.

Mrs. Charlotte Belle Ware, of Boston, chairman of the education committee, yesterday explained the unique aim of the organization.

"I know of no other society that seeks to bring rural women and city women together in such a common bond of cooperation," she said. "While we do not go into the technical phases of instructing women how to raise vegetables and how to beautify gardens, we do try to raise the standards of food products and handcraft. Some of our groups, the Allegheny division, for instance, limits itself to beautification; others stress the marketing side. But all are primarily interested in promulgating an understanding between the rural and the city woman."

Mrs. Ware said a fellowship and a scholarship are offered each year, open to women and girls throughout the country.

Named for President.

"The fellowship awarded as the Sarah Bradley Tyson memorial is named in honor of a former national president of the association. At present, it is held by a woman of South Dakota, who is attending the University of Michigan.

"The scholarship, provided by Mrs. Lou Henry Hoover, is awarded each year to an outstanding Girl Scout, selected by a special committee from the National board of the Girl Scouts."

Mrs. Ware explained that each division is carrying on educational work by providing local scholarships.

An outstanding feature of the meeting will consist of an exhibit and sale of food products and handcraft contributed by the eight divisions. The display, held at the Dodge Hotel, will open at noon tomorrow.

Organized in 1914 by Mrs. Frances King, still honorary president, the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association now has eight divisions.

With Mrs. Henry Ford as active president, the organization is a member of the Associated Countrywomen of the World, which has its headquarters in London, is affiliated in 30 countries, and has as its major aim the creating and preserving of horticultural beauty and the promulgation of international cooperation between its members.

Sirens in Cleopatra's Heyday Used Soot as Cosmetic Allure

SOME OF THE SIRENS of bygone ages would look like clowns today. Being without the luxurious cosmetics modern women have at their disposal, they did the best they could with makeshift methods, and doubtless deemed them highly satisfactory.

Imagine them winking and ogling with luminous eyes surrounded with a rim of soot! And that was the actual state of affairs. Egyptologists, digging in the musty tombs of the Ptolemys never fail to find interred with each mummified princess a small flask containing black powder called Kohl. With glass sticks attached to the stopper of the container they would use this to draw uncompromising black lines around their eyes. When they finished they no doubt regarded themselves with pride, and felt satisfied they had acquired a marked degree of allure.

Fashionable ladies of the middle ages weren't a bit more fortunate. They used ordinary lamp black to enhance their eyes. They would hold a dish over a lighted candle, and the smudge that collected on the bottom was transferred to the eyelids.

It is a far step from the crude methods of those days to the highly developed aids that mark the modern age. With little effort and money women today can buy eyeshadow, mascara and eyebrow pencil, all so beautifully perfected they can not be detected as artifice.

They can far surpass the make-up artistry of such fascinators as Cleopatra and Lucretia Borgia. They have more mystery on one eyelid than these had with all their sooty shadows.

Americans Family-Conscious, Maintains French Journalist

PARIS, April 29 (Spl.).—American family life is enjoying a renaissance, thanks to recent economic distress, believes Mme. Phillippe Soupault, Parisienne journalist who has just returned from the United States.

Human relations, especially within the family, have become more intense as a result of widespread feeling of insecurity, Mme. Soupault found. This sense of insecurity has brought members of American families into closer collaboration and cooperation, the journalist declared upon her return to Paris.

"I learned the children are being taught at an early age to take part in the life and chores of the household and to do their daily stint," she reported. "Boys and girls of only 15 and 16 are serious and brave. They have watched their families go through a severe test. But that test has made them more human, more alive. In fact, the American family is on the way to becoming an ideal of what a family should be."

The independence of American women won the strong approval of Mme. Soupault. She was impressed with the fact the function of being a housewife is never considered a duty or obligation.

"It is a choice each woman is free to make, an extra work for which the husband shows his gratitude and esteem and even remunerates with a sort of 'salary,'" said the Parisienne. By salary she meant the allowance American husbands give their wives for household and personal expenses.

New Fragrance Combines Many Flower Scents

Violet, Rose, Jasmine—It's A Regular Garden All By Itself.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONE POPULAR scent is a symphony of fragrances. It is a perfect blend of orange blossom, violet, rose, tuberose and jasmine—a mingling of innocence, subtlety, sweetness and mystery.

It has been described as "the bottled essence of a perfumed night, faintly redolent with the lovely aroma of a dew drenched garden under the spell of a June moon."

When women seek a perfume they want one which adapts itself to their personality, which is a reminder of memories, hauntingly sweet, like the fragrances borne on a morning breeze.

They are able to find in this perfume all they are looking for. Who amongst them can not recall some association with orange blossoms, violets, roses, tuberoses or jasmine? Who has not some memory of a moonlit garden?

When the perfumer blended the five fragrances he bore these things in mind and endeavor to create a wistful, lingering scent that would sound the chords of every woman's heart.

Realizing the value of a toilet complete with one perfume, he also manufactured a boudoir spray, sachet, face powder, bath powder, talcum powder, cleansing cream, vanishing cream, tissue cream, rouge, lipstick and compact, eyebrow pencil, lash tint, brilliantine, bath crystals and smelling salts to bring a modern elegance to his old-fashioned essence.

Cut in Half.

A well-known make of soap ordinarily sells for 10 cents a cake, but now there is a special offer whereby one may purchase it for 5 cents—until the present supply is gone. There are five scents to choose from—charmis, lavender, lilac and orchis.

And Another.

Another shop enters the bargain ranks with a sale of costume jewelry. Earrings, necklaces, bracelets, clips and compacts that formerly sold for $1 apiece are now two for 79 cents.

• • • •

To Improve Juleps.

Some drinks are all right with ice cubes, but they're so much better with crushed ice it's a shame to attempt bartending without an ice crusher set—especially since the sets are only 29 cents.

The sets include ice pick, wooden mallet and canvas bag.

Complete Equipment.

One of the best selling beauty kits sponsored by local shops has complete equipment for keeping the skin in top-notch condition. It contains four creams, one for cleansing, one for the hands, a foundation cream, and tissue cream. It also has a little box of face powder and some cotton pads.

There are two types of kits, one for oily or normal skins and another for dry skins.

Moths, Beware.

It has been estimated moths do about $200,000,000 worth of damage every year. Some portion of that occurs in your closest to your wardrobe. But why should it? There are hundreds of methods to drive the ravenous little insects away. There are hundreds of means which are inexpensive and easy to use.

One of the most modern is an electrical fumigator, selling for $1. It is guaranteed to last two years. Plug it in, and let it hang in the closet for 30 minutes, and moths will be exiled for 30 days. At the end of that time repeat the procedure and by and by there'll be no moths.

For Any Young Fella.

Once upon a time there were some good looking wallets and key cases which sold for $3 and $4. Then along came a great big sale and the poor little things had their prices knocked down to $1.95.

There isn't one of them some deserving young fellow wouldn't be tickled to have. Some of them are dull finish, some shiny; some combination leathers, others plain. And there's brown, black, tan and gray to choose from, in small and large grains.

• • • •

Fashionable Funnies.

Comical horses, funny Scotties and a few odd-looking cats, have joined the fashion parade in the guise of wooden pins. A local gift shop has a counter full of them, in singles and doubles. They sell for 50 cents and $1, respectively.

Hay in the House.

An "air perfume" with the scent of new mown hay is sure to have a cordial welcome. Poured into a wall vase, or table disk, it will drive away all disagreeable cooking odors or stale smoke. Both vase and disk were manufactured to accompany the perfume.

Besides the hay scent, there's a variety of others—lilac, rose, oriental, pine, chypre and bouquet.

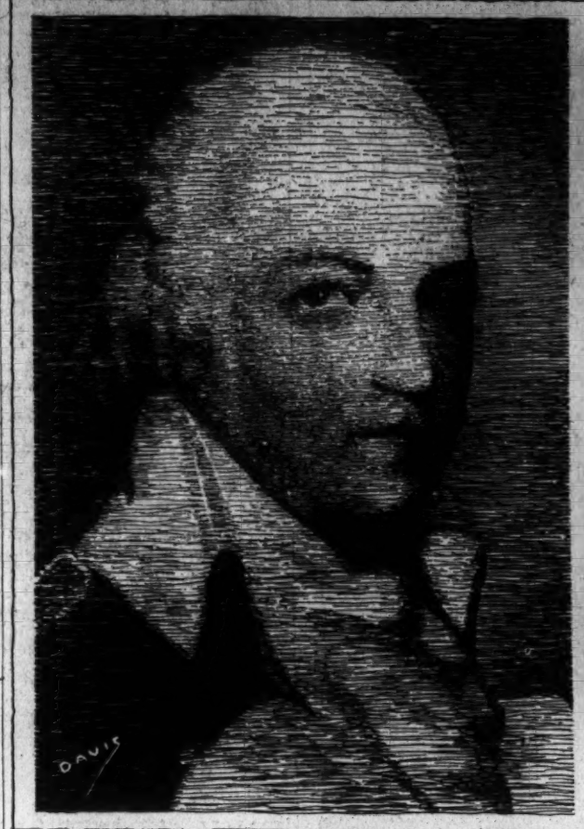
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Light-Horse Harry Lee—Ann Carter



AFTER Light-Horse Harry Lee had won name and fame in the Revolution, he settled down at the family home, Stratford, with his first wife. He was young, handsome, the darling of Virginia at the time of his wife's death. A Southern belle of a famous family, Ann Carter, recaptured his heart; he took her back to Stratford, where their illustrious son, Robert E. Lee, was born.

Robert E. Lee's Parents Had an Old Dominion Romance.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

IT IS SPRING in the Old Dominion, and at Shirley on the James the honeysuckle, wildrose, magnolia and flowering plum tree are blooming. Within the stately walls of the old home, Carter owned through most of its generation of gracious living, those who possess the eyes of the spirit see a gentle wraith, that of lovely Ann Carter Lee, the sweetheart, bride and widow of Light-Horse Harry Lee, and mother of that Chevalier Bayard of the South—Gen. Robert Edward Lee.

Fragrant as the Shirley blooms are the memories which cluster around her name. She never will be forgotten while grace and woman's loving loyalty are remembered by mankind.

Paul Wilstach, modern chronicler of those old days has described the setting for this romance as follows in "Tidewater Virginia:" "The building is of brick, laid, like its other great contemporaries, in Flemish bond of alternately glazed black headers and dull pink broadsides which give the walls solidity, distinction and a rich beauty. The reception rooms carry heavy cornices over walls entirely paneled, and the carved doorways and mantels are equaled in few other Colonial houses. Here, too, the collections of books, plate, furniture and portraits remain almost intact, representative of an accumulation over many generations."

Little Ann Carter learned the good ways of living from her devoted mother. The splendid fruit of this teaching was acknowledged afterward in these words: "With the fostering care of such a mother the son must go straight. She planted him (Robert Edward Lee) in the soil of truth, morality and religion."

Revolutionary Fame.

To return to Light-Horse Harry Lee. The name was given him when he won fame in the Revolution as the captain of a dashing company of adventurous spirits known as "The Light Horse," that did much damage to British ranks and were especially skilled in the capture of prisoners.

In the little town of Dumfries, Va., near what is now Quantico, headquarters of the U. S. Marines, a type of soldier and sailor that would have delighted the soul of Light-Horse Harry Lee, this American soldier was born on January 29, 1756. His father was the first cousin of Richard Henry Lee, American statesman and orator, who prepared the resolution which finally resulted in the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. His mother was Lucy Grymes, a famous Lowland beauty, once greatly admired by no less a person than a certain George Washington, of Mount Vernon, Va.

The Lees were people of considerable standing in the Virginias at the time of Henry's birth. Back of them stretched a line to old England through doughty Richard Lee, of Moreton Reigs, Shropshire, a gentleman and captain in the army of King Charles the First. His services to the unhappy Charles whose unsteady throne was later a short step to the scaffold, were rewarded by a patent to vast acres of land in the virgin country beyond the seas.

Bidding farewell to his native land, Col. Lee set forth on his new venture. In what is now Westmoreland County, Va., he selected the site for his home. It was unbroken wilderness then and the red peril lingered at the door of the white settler, were he King's man or pioneer. The colonel cleared river land on the banks of the Potomac and built himself a spacious Colonial mansion named Stratford, in grateful memory of a family place in the old country.

Henry Lee was a law student at Princeton when the storm of the Revolution broke over his country. Down went his Blackstone and the 19-year-old lad buckled on Col. Richard's sword and answered "Here I am!" to the bugle that called those pioneer sons to arms.

It wasn't long before Henry Lee the law student had grown into manhood and captain's bars. Before he was 25 his gallantry had won him high rank. His greatest military exploit was the brilliant surprise of Paulus Hook, N. J., on August 19, in 1779. He was present at Cornwallis' surrender, but afterward left the Army because of ill health.

The war over, Light-Horse Harry Lee retired to Stratford where, with his first wife, Matilda Ludwell Lee, and his two infant sons, he was happy until Matilda died.

He thought romance was over for him then, but he reckoned not on Fate and the charms of Ann Carter.

The maidens of Shirley had been noted for generations for grace and beauty and when dashing Light Horse Harry Lee met Ann Carter, 18 or thereabouts, at a ball in Richmond he at once acknowledged the traditional virtues had been inherited by her fair person.

She Was a Carter Girl, a Family Noted for Lovely Women.

He carried the vision of her loveliness back to lone Stratford and discovered all at once love was springing up in his heart once more.

Col. Carter invited the major general to visit him at Shirley. Little Anne, by this time budding into womanhood, had begun to dream of a Prince Charming who would come and bear her "over the hills and far away." The lindens and magnolias in the spring nights made magic and it was not long before the two developed their mutual romance to the point of declaration. Col. Carter said "yes" gladly when the brave Light Horse Harry Lee, the darling of Virginia, begged for his daughter's hand.

A Gay Household.

Happiness reigned once more at Stratford when the Major General arrived with his bride. In the years to come four sturdy sons and two fair daughters made the old roof ring with childish gayety and laughter.

There on the 19th of January, 1807, was born Robert Edward Lee, the youngest son. When "Bob" was 4 years old, a change came in the family fortunes and they moved to Alexandria, to a stately house on Washington street. Sunshine and shadows of married life followed until Gen. Lee was seriously injured in a Baltimore riot while protecting a friend. For six years he was an invalid.

Gen. Lee then went to the West Indies to regain his health. But one morning a messenger arrived with terrible news. On his way home he stopped to visit a Mrs. Shaw, the daughter of his old commander who lived on Cumberland Island off the coast of Georgia, and while there had died suddenly.

In her children and especially in her son, Robert, Mrs. Lee found consolation. In her last years Mrs. Lee was an invalid and Robert attended her with a complete forgetfulness of all other claims upon his time.

It was not until after his graduation from West Point Mrs. Lee died, with the name "Harry" on her lips. Afterwards Gen. Robert E. Lee kept her daguerreotype with him, in the field, in his tent and in the president's study.

The Civil War over, Gen. Robert E. Lee as president of Washington and Lee College at Lexington, Va., never failed in his talks to the young men to stress the necessity of appreciation of constant sacrifices and abiding love of their mothers.

Louis Fourteenth Period One of Great Elegance

By Jo Ellen Maxon.

LOUIS XIV, the "Grand Monarch," gathered to his court the best artists of France and Italy to create fine buildings and beautiful works of art.

The palace at Versailles, with its mirrored galleries, tapestries, engravings, inlaid cabinets and elegant furnishings, is an index to the splendor and grandeur of this influential period.

The world had never seen such sumptuous and pretentious rooms as were designed at this time. It became known, fittingly, as the "Grand Style." In its purest form, it is ill adapted to use in the homes of today—the furniture itself would seem tawdry without its rich palatial backgrounds. But there is much that can be adapted from this period to enhance modern homes which follow the French decorating trend.

Straight lines dominated furniture structure, but there was an abundance of curves, large and full, to soften the angles.

Sofas and long benches and stools were designed in graceful, flowing lines, and upholstered in brocades, Utrecht velvets, damasks and satins. Color was used in exquisite combinations, violet and lemon, turquoise and coral, silver and rose.

Aubusson carpets woven in subtle color harmonies in floral and wreathed patterns added to the richness of effect.

The accessories of this period are really the best adapted for modern usage. They include a fascinating list of objects which represent the graces of an era of luxurious living: fire screens, torcheres, silk flowers, crystal chandeliers, gilt mirrors and enarqueterie clocks.

Miss Maxson gives help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post or phone National 4205 for an appointment.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Tuberculosis in Nurses.

A certain hospital was considerably agitated about the amount of tuberculosis found among its nurses. This hospital is for people with consumption. The nurses are young women just at the age in which there is the greatest tendency to break down. Furthermore, it is in people of this age group that the effort to control consumption is meeting the most stubborn resistance.

The consumption rate is falling steadily and fairly rapidly, but not evenly. It is hanging back in people of the young adult group. The hours of work for nurses in a hospital training school are long and the work is hard.

In a consumption hospital the patients are trained not to cough needlessly, and to spit carefully and with regard for the rights of others. Exceptional cleanliness as to bedding, furniture and floors is the rule. Effort is made to prevent cross-infections, secondary infections, and giving consumption to others.

I WAS A SPY

By MARTHE McKENNA

What Has Gone Before.

Marthe McKenna, Belgian woman, was a British secret agent in the World War. Condemned to die for espionage, her life was saved by last-minute commutation of sentence, this autobiographical serial reveals her amazing adventures. Sunday's installment presented her background before she had any idea that she would play a part in the war; you can pick up the story at this point and continue it in The Washington Post.

GLAD in rags and with all our worldly belongings piled high in one small handcart we passed through the winding streets of the old country-town of Roulers. What a difference 6 miles could make! We had come from an atmosphere of blood and desolation and smoking destruction to a welcoming spot whose gabled houses in their unharmed serenity held an air of refreshing peace. Civilians busy about their own affairs mingled with the swarms of soldiers in the streets, for apart from its large German garrison Roulers was a place of about 27,000 inhabitants. A bewildered little group of homeless women, we stood in the Grand Place and looked about us. A market was in progress and at first no one took much notice of us. We did not know where to go or what to do. My mother and had learned while we were at Westroosebeke that my father was somewhere in Roulers, but we had heard nothing from him since the night he was marched away under escort with the others. A well-dressed middle-aged woman approached us.

"You are refugees and you have nowhere to go to, isn't that so," she questioned us kindly. "I can take two of you as lodgers in my house, and I think I can arrange about accommodation for the rest with friends if you will come with me * * *"

The house lay on the edge of the town overlooking the fields and an hour later my mother and I had sorted our possessions from the heap in the cart, and after depositing them in a large comfortable bedroom alloted to us by the middle-aged lady, were waiting in the warmth of the great open fire, which crackled on the kitchen hearth with its massive fire-dogs and iron spit, until the rest of the household gathered for the midday meal. This consisted of our hostess' husband, a prominent local grocer; her young sister, who had fled from her convent school at the approach of the Germans; two German officers of the Army of Wurtemburg billeted on the premises, an aged couple and a youngish woman and her small boy, refugees like ourselves.

Her Father Sought.

Our hostess promised to make inquiries in the town for my father, and thanks to her efforts he came to the house to see us two days later. For committing some minor breach of discipline he had been imprisoned for some considerable time, and since then he had worked for a farmer living on the outskirts of the town, with whom he lodged.

The kommandant in Westroosebeke had handed me a letter written on my behalf by himself and also one written by the army doctor whom I had worked under. I had instructions to take these to the senior feldwebel at the Roulers Hospital, and set out for the hospital the next morning, having made myself as presentable as possible in my old clothes, for until we could get in touch with my father we were without money.

Out along the Menin road not far from Roulers stood the tall gray buildings of the college, set in spacious tree-shaded grounds, and from the battlements flew the Red Cross flag. A gray-headed, soldierly looking officer was seated behind the desk in the well-furnished office into which an orderly ushered me near the pillared main entrance. He was the Oberartz, and after reaching the letters I handed him, told me kindly that he would be more than grateful for any help which I should give his hospital. I should be the only nurse there, although there were several Belgian women employed in cooking, washing and other domestic capacities.

Invited to Lunch.

The Oberartz asked me to lunch with him and the other surgeons, and every department of the hospital was explained to me. I was perhaps most struck with the civilian clinic, where civilians of the district suffering from every possible form of ailment were treated. The charges here were of the fairest, being based entirely on the means of the patient, and though rich people went away grumbling at the excessive fees, which were no more than they would have paid to a civil specialist, poor people paid little or nothing for the most skilled attention. To my certain knowledge there are many poor people of my district today who could never have hoped for a cure in all their lives but for the treatment at the Roulers German Hospital. I agreed to start work at 7 a. m. on the Monday following, and was armed with a note to the town-kommandant from the Oberartz requesting that I should be given a night pass which would allow me out into the streets at any time of the night in case of an emergency call from the hospital, for curfew was enforced between 7 p. m. and 5 a. m., during which hours no unlicensed civilian might leave his house, and the streets were peopled only by soldiery.

Soon after my arrival at Roulers I was to find myself a participant in strange events of a nature which in my wildest dreams I had never pictured myself taking part, but before I plunge into the maelstrom I think it absolutely necessary, so that the reader can visualize Roulers under the Germans in 1915, to give a brief sketch of the life and conditions.

Curfew Was Early.

Roulers was under the control of a town-kommandant or military district magistrate who kept order throughout the town and environs with a body of military gendarmerie, a certain number of which acted as plainclothes agents, and for their supsicious and overbearing behavior these last were known as the "Berlin Vampires." Although under the military commander for the district for his orders, the town-kommandant so far as we wretched civilians were concerned was a demigod. If he disapproved of something which the inhabitants had done he changed the curfew hour from 7 p. m. to 4 p. m. or even earlier, and perhaps fined the town a sum of money as well. He sentenced evildoers (and not infrequently nonevildoers whom his police brought before him) to terms of imprisonment. He was very vigilant in the nosing out of spies and food hoarders, and during the daylight hour all houses had to be left open so that his agents might walk in to take a look round whenever they pleased. Troops and their officers were billeted in every house of any size and there was an aerodrome on the outskirts, so that Roulers was subject to occasional air raids. It had at one time been shelled heavily, as certain roofless and pock-marked buildings testified, but in 1915 only a stray shell or two crumpled down in the vicinity, doing little damage.

Many of the refugee women who had found refuge in the town were utterly destitute and a large number of these, with girls recruited locally, were well paid by the Germans to manufacture sandbags and other necessities. These sandbags were made of all kinds of odd material such as silk, velvet and cretonne, anything which could be procured from the local merchants, in fact.

Girls Were Imprisoned.

At the time of our arrival three girl sandbag-makers were undergoing a prison sentence for having succumbed to temptation. Having been allotted some peculiarly pretty lengths of patterned silk for their bags, they contrived to smuggle this off the premises to make dresses for themselves, but were unfortunately asked to disclose what they carried in their parcels by an inquisitive "Berlin Vampire." These "martyrs," however, set a fashion in crime, for clothes were already expensive to procure and were to become far more so.

Seventy-five per cent of every sort of product was claimed by the German levying commission; the civilians scrambled for the remaining 25 per cent, and had it not been for the American Relief Commission the suffering would have been terrible. Supplies came from Antwerp direct from the U. S. A. and all vessels bearing an American flag which were marked in a certain way were allowed through the submarine blockade. The organizer of the relief commission was Mr. Hoover, the present United States President. At Antwerp the ships were unloaded under a mixed commission of Americans and Belgians, and the food was distributed to towns and departments in accordance with the indents sent in by local civil committees, reaching their destination either by rail or road, whichever the German authorities could spare for transport purposes at the moment. Seals were placed on the bales of goods and strict orders were issued that nothing should be touched. As a rule it never was, but there were occasions when some German regiment en route looted the sealed vehicles on the quiet.

Food Was Poor.

Bacon, putrid stuff nicknamed "Wilson" by the disgusted civilians, rice, meal, small quantities of sugar and a kind of broken maize called cerealing by the Relief Commission and "Hoover" by those who had to eat it, were the only foodstuffs the commission supplied, and although we grumbled at the quality we were at heart exceedingly grateful to get the food. Upon arrival in Roulers the consignment was sorted and removed to an empty shop in the town, and here we repaired with our ration cards to buy as much as they would allow us at extremely reasonable prices. There were times when the quantities for sale were tragically short.

As for the general conduct of the Germans in the place, they were the conquerors and we must not forget the fact, but to those Belgians with whom they were brought in close contact they were guardedly friendly. There were, of course, incidents such as occur in any garrison town in war time, but the troops were under strict discipline. As for us, there was among the civilians an atmosphere of continual silent antagonism, antagonism not so much against individuals but against the harsh German yoke and the minions who maintained it.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Cheese Used In Various Ways Adds Touch of Snappiness.

By Susan Mills.

CHEESE, whether it is used as a main dish or as a seasoning always adds snappiness to a meal. Take a common potato, for instance, or a cup of boiled rice, add a little cheese and you have something the family will want again.

Here's one way to popularize the potato.

Bake several large potatoes and when done remove top of potato with a sharp knife. Scoop out inside of potato and mash—add butter, milk and seasoning. Refill potato shell. With a pastry bag, make an attractive border at the top edge of the potato. Over the center of the potato place a generous serving of Welsh rarebit made with bottled beer. Brown in the oven or under the broiler just before serving.

If you want change in the starch dish, try cheese rice cakes. What would be more appetizing for Sunday night than these cakes served with a tart jelly and slices of fried ham?

Cheese Rice Cakes.

1 tablespoon butter.
½ cup grated American cheese.
1 pimento, chopped.
¼ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon pepper.
1 egg white, beaten.

Combine rice, butter and cheese. Add pimento (if desired). Season. Form into small cakes. Dip in egg white which has been beaten. Place on buttered pan and bake about 15 mniutes in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.). Serve with tomato sauce.

What Today Means to You

"Taurus."

If April 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 12 noon to 2 p. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., from 7 to 9 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to 1 a. m.

You probably will meet a friend on this date either socially or in a business way, who may expect an explanation for your failing to do something that had been requested a short time ago. Be very cautious about offering any excuse or possible justification, unless sure that it is absolutely plausible and can be verified.

The woman born on April 30 is extremely systematic, as a rule, in her habits. If born on this date, untidiness in the home has a very irritating effect upon you. It may be advisable to realize that many people are not possessed with your sense of orderliness, and it might prove wise to overlook their lack of it, providing you desire peace in the household. Indulge your fondness for entertainment, the mental relaxation resulting will prove beneficial. In the selection of friends, especially of the male variety, be discriminating. You can not afford to be careless about your companions.

The child born on April 30 when it reaches its teens, will display a very restless nature. It is most essential during this passing phase, that it be encouraged to develop some hobby, so that it will have a definite interest on which to concentrate its attention. Its home life should be made as agreeable as possible, and the child should be made to realize its playmates are always welcomed in the house.

Women born on April 30 will derive a great deal of pleasure traveling. Being inclined to have restless dispositions, a change of scene will make them appreciate their own home when they return to it, but it is advisable they take a vacation just every so often.

The man born on April 30 has the spirit of the viking. He loves to ramble, especially if the places are away from the congested sections of civilization. If you can spend your time traveling, whether on business or pleasure, the greater your contentment.

People born on April 30 are rather matter-of-fact when dealing with the stern realities of every day existence, but display a decidely romantic streak where affairs of the heart are involved. People born on this date will find it advisable in their home life to try more readily to adjust themselves to the individual characteristics of the other members of the household, instead of trying to impose their own upon them.

Halbert Says Relief Probe Is Welcomed

Director Finds Gotwals Nonresident Aid Total Too High.

Those Being Helped Who Have Outside Income Also Problem.

Estimates of Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals that one-third of relief recipients in the District are not entitled to it because they are not bona fide residents were termed excessive yesterday by Leroy A. Halbert, director of emergency relief for the District.

Of persons who have applied for relief within the past month not more than 1 per cent would be found in the nonresident class, in Mr. Halbert's opinion. This low percentage exists, the director pointed out, probably because relief officials have not yet completed a check of records during April.

The difficulty, Mr. Halbert said, is not to determine the number of nonresident applicants, but those who are receiving an outside income and are not entitled to relief. He believes there is a certain percentage of such persons.

Cites Probe Figures.

The relief director referred to facts brought out at a recent Congressional hearing, to the effect that of those receiving relief here in the past fiscal year, 89 per cent had been Washington residents for three years, and 20 per cent were born here.

Mr. Halbert also believes a certain percentage of relief recipients have been welcoming a hand-out in preference to working. The next two weeks will reveal just how many of these cases exist, he said.

"So far as the nonresident applicants are concerned there is not as much reason for them to come to us now as there was a year ago, because of the establishment since then of the transient relief bureau," Mr. Halbert declared.

Increase Each Month.

Relief expenses have increased since the termination of the CWA because materials for relief projects now have to be purchased out of the relief funds, the director explained. He expressed belief that the coming month will bring a decline in the number of relief applicants, because of warmer weather and the opening up of other jobs.

"For the past year we have had an increase each month in the number of applicants, despite the number that were stricken off the lists," he said. "In April, 1933, there was a decline over the number during March of that year, but there has been no decrease in any month since then."

Mr. Halbert calculated that between 23,000 and 25,000 were on the District relief rolls in April and that 11,000 of these were on work projects.

Forces to Be Cut.

The force in charge of relief administration will be curtailed 25 per cent this month, the director declared. This will be possible, he explained, because a great deal of the investigation work necessary during April will be finished. About 1,000 persons are employed in various capacities in operation of relief machinery.

Termination of special educational emergency projects on May 15 is not expected to throw an additional burden on relief work. The director expressed hope that persons employed in these projects will find some other means of getting along.

Mr. Halbert said he welcomes the proposal of investigating relief machinery. He observed that every time Federal officials had investigated they had founud more funds were necessary.

District officials have asked approximately $900,000 for relief work in May, $100,000 less than was granted in April.

The display consists of both official and unofficial work from the Navy, War, Treasury Departments and the Veterans' Administration.

District Police Plan to Clean Out Gangsters

Quiz After Shooting Is Shifted Here; Girl Bares Secrets.

Detective Sergts. Floyd Truscott and Elmer Lewis returned early yesterday from Upper Darby, armed with information obtained from the wounded woman. They refused to disclose plans, but remained at headquarters for several hours yesterday pouring over rogue's gallery photographs.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burk, detective chief, would not comment on developments in the case.

"We are just sitting tight and waiting," he said.

Reports from Upper Darby, meanwhile, told of relaxed activities. Pennsylvania authorities insisted the investigation had "shifted to Washington."

A heavy guard remained at the bedside of Mrs. Fontaine following what was believed to be a second attack on her life. She was found last Thursday on the front step of an Upper Darby apartment house, shot and near death.

Police said she was "put on the spot because she knew too much." She was admittedly the sweetheart of William B. Phillips, escaped convict and gunman, killed by Policeman John A. Caton during a gun battle at Adams Mill road and Ontario place northwest April 12.

Phillips was held responsible for a $30,000 cigarette highjacking near Welden, N. C., last month.

Defense of South's Wage Level Is Urged

Richmond, April 29 (AP).—The Virginia Manufacturers' Association, through its secretary, Frank Louthan, yesterday appealed for a united front of Virginia industrialists to resist attempts by National recovery act officials to raise Southern wages to levels obtaining in similar industries in the North.

The communication calls attention to "the determination of a large group of persons in the United States, including National labor organizations, certain collegiate advisers of the Administration, and the predominating Eastern industrial groups, to wipe out all wage differentials, which have heretofore been granted and to avoid such in future."

Peery's Chauffeur Is Victim of Holdup

Richmond, April 29 (AP).—Robert Palmer, colored chauffeur of Gov. George C. Perry, was the victim of two holdup men who robbed him of several dollars on a downtown street, it was revealed at the Executive Mansion yesterday.

Palmer reported he was walking along Main street, about 1:30 a. m. on April 25. Two white men asked him for a match and, as he reached for it, pointed a pistol at him and demanded his money.

River, Harbor Group Opens Parley Today

Variety of Problems to Be Considered; Two Envoys to Be Speakers.

Problems of navigation, flood control, irrigation, reforestation and power will be considered by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at its twenty-ninth annual convention at the Mayflower Hotel today and tomorrow.

The several hundred delegates expected to attend as representatives of waterway organizations, chambers of commerce and other public bodies, will hear addresses by Hans Luther, Ambassador of Germany, and Alexander Troyanovsky, Ambassador of U. S. S. R., on waterway developments in their native lands.

Coordination of its program with that of the Administration for the control and use of National waterways is the aim of the convention. Speakers on the program, arranged by Representative Frank R. Reid, Illinois, president of the congress, and Clarence B. Douglas, of Tulsa, Okla., vice president, for the most part are Senators and Representatives.

Particular interest will attach itself to the talks by the Ambassador. Germany is said to have made great strides in the development of waterways and the Soviet envoy will describe water power development. Both of these addresses will be made at the annual banquet at the Mayflower tomorrow evening.

The comprehensive initial morning session includes addresses by Senator Key Pittman, Nevada, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations; Representative Riley J. Wilson, Louisiana, chairman of the House Committee on Flood Control; Representative Joseph J. Mansfield, Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors; Representative Sam Rayburn, Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri, a member of the Senate Committee on Commerce; Representative William J. Driver, Arkansas, a member of the House Committee on Rules; Representative Will M. Whittington, Mississippi, ranking majority member of the House Committee on Flood Control, and Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, U. S. A., president of the Inland Waterways Corporation.

Services Are Held For Cave Maryland

Luray, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday for Cave Wayland, a prominent farmer of Madison County.

Mr. Wayland was found dead Friday between the handles of his plow. He was one of the most widely known farmers of eastern Virginia. A widow and several children survive him.

Kite Contests Open Saturday At Four Parks

13 Competitions Slated During Spring; Adults to Participate.

Lifting their painted faces to the sun, frisking their tagged tails in the wind, Washington's kites will bid for prizes and glory in 13 contests this spring.

The competitions are to be held under the auspices of the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League, in cooperation with the Elementary Science Corps, the Manual Training Department and the Community Center Department of the public schools and the Municipal Playground Department.

First contests will be held Saturday at Takoma Recreation Center, Meridian Hill Park, Rosedale Playground and Banneker Park. On May 12 meets are scheduled at Taft Recreation Center, Anacostia Park, Bloomingdale Reservoir and Francis J. High Center. The Monument Grounds, Kenilworth Park, Chevy Chase Playground and Anacostia Park will be the scenes of the contests booked for May 19, while a final contest will be held May 26 at Kingman Lake Park.

Kites will be judged in several classes, including the most artistic or original kites, kites which display the best workmanship and those which perform most satisfactorily. All contests will begin at 2 p. m., and contestants are divided into four groups. These are children not yet 12 years old; those between 12 and 16; persons 16 or older, and fathers and sons.

The contestants must make their own kites, except in a single class, where an adult may assist a subjunior in building. Kites also will be judged in three divisions: Kites without tails, box kites and combination kites.

The chairmen of the respective organizations sponsoring the meets include Miss M. Edith Robinson, Mrs. Mabel S. Weidemann, Miss Ruth Griggs, A. P. Brent and M. J. Hawkins for the Elementary Science Corps; H. H. Cleary, O. S. Scheidel and E. F. Brumbaugh for the manual training department, and Herman Riley, Mrs. Frances Kessler, Edward Underdown and Clarence Pendleton for the municipal playground department.

2 Crisfield Drivers Hurt in Collision

Crisfield, Md., April 29 (Spl.).—Ellis Tawesville, restaurant operator here, was seriously injured when the car he was driving collided with another driven by Roy Woodland, owner of the Marion Station Garage on the State highway near here.

Tawesville was rushed to McCready Memorial Hospital. His car was wrecked. Woodland suffered minor injures and his car was badly damaged.

20 Millions District PWA Loan Pushed

Mrs. Norton to Seek House Approval by Special Means.

Blanton Will Oppose D. C. Borrowing Fund for Relief Works.

Steps will be taken today by Chairman Norton of the House District Committee to obtain House approval of the $20,000,000 loan authorization bill for the District before the next District day, which does not occur for two weeks.

Because of the speed with which the Senate passed the measure Friday, Mrs. Norton said she did not want to leave the bill until the closing days of the Congressional session for fear its passage might be blocked.

"I'm going to use every parliamentary procedure possible to put this bill through the House as early as possible," she said.

Mrs. Norton said she would confer today with Speaker Rainey and with Representative Bankhead, chairman of the rules committee, and ask a special rule so that the bill may be considered at the first break in National legislation.

Without such a rule the bill could only be brought up under unanimous consent before the next District day, and Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, has already told the House he would fight the measure as he is opposed to allowing the District to borrow money.

Early Report Slated.

The House District Committee will consider the measure Wednesday and probably report it favorably immediately. With a rule, the bill may be presented to the House before the end of the week.

The measure authorizes the District Commissioners to borrow $20,000,000 from the Public Works Administration for the construction of a new Tuberculosis Hospital, a sewage disposal plant, the first unit of the Municipal Center, an addition to Gallinger Hospital, additional schools, parks and playgrounds, and completion of the walled group of buildings at the Lorton Reformatory.

Mrs. Norton also plans to have all the major District measures ready for presentation on the next District day, if possible, because of the proximity of adjournment.

If it appears on May 14, the next District day, that the District may not get another regular day, which would fall on the fourth Monday of May, Mrs. Norton will ask for special time to present District legislation.

She is particularly anxious to push through her old age pension and alley dwelling bills. While Blanton succeeded last Monday in blocking passage, the District committee chairman is confident that she will obtain House approval when a vote is taken.

Would Start Clearing Slums.

The alley dwelling bill will authorize the District to obtain funds from the Public Works Administration to begin clearing Washington's slums, as advocated by The Washington Post.

Among the most important of more than a score of other pending District bills are the following:

To transfer the executive powers of the Board of Public Welfare to the District Commissioners; to extend the powers of the Commissioners; to amend the District parole act; to amend the procedure before the Public Utilities Commission; to authorize construction of a sewage disposal plant; to amend the fire escape law; to amend the insurance act; to require financial responsibility by taxicab operators; to require financial responsibility of all auto owners held to blame in accidents; to adjust land claims on the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers and on Rock Creek, and the usury bill now pending in the Senate.

Bernard Stpehens, 60, Is Paid Last Tribute

Fredericksburg, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Bernard Stephens, 60, of Holly Corner, Stafford County, who died Friday, were held today at the old family burial grounds near Holly Corner.

Mr. Stephens is survived by one sister, Mrs. James Burton, and two brothers, Lawrence and Harrison Stephens, all of Stafford County.

Church to Observe 199th Anniversary

Ashland, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—The 199th anniversary of the old Mangohick Church in King William County will be observed on the first Sunday in June, the same date on which the pastor, the Rev. William H. Ford, will begin his forty-first year.

Dr. Frank L. Day, of Randolph-Macon College, will deliver the anniversary sermon. Mangohick Church was built by the English in 1735, the date of erection of the Hanover Courthouse.

Kilmarnock Retains Fifty-Cent Tax Rate

Kilmarnock, Va., April 29 (Spl.). The tax levy of 50 cents on the $100 was maintained by the town council in its April meeting. T. S. Brent was elected president of the council for the coming year.

The first week in May was set as "Clean-Up Week for the town.

A resolution was passed repealing local prohibition laws which conflict with the State laws passed at the recent session of the General Assembly.

"I Think I Go Toledo," Hurdy-Gurdy Pete Declares.

If you have missed a sign of spring this year, go see Pietro Battagliola, of 1610 Q street northwest, who controls 50 per cent of the hurdy-gurdy business in the capital.

Just ask for "Pete."

He will be glad to come out and play "I Wanna Sing Like the Birdies Sing" beneath your window some morning, thus completing your cycle of spring signs from the first robin to the opening ball game.

In fact, Pete will come out tomorrow morning if you like. For, although one-half of the industry here is his, the only other hurdy-gurdy in town belonging to his friend, C. Morisa, of 2148 F street northwest, the business has fallen upon evil days.

He means that even with a monkey his earnings would be nothing like they were in the peak years. Pete used to clean up as much as $3.50 and $4 a day.

"Da radio an' da phonograph maka me sick," says Pete.

That means the machine age has passed him by, left him to push a contraption of the waltz era in a day of crooners—another example of technological displacement.

"I think I go to Toledo, Ohio."

That's Pete's way of saying he's about fed up on the Capital and intends to go to a place where phonographs and radios may be less numerous.

Twenty-five years ago Pete lost his job and went into the hurdy-gurdy business. He's been in it ever since. He's pushed and played in New York, Baltimore, Washington, Columbus and Toledo. He liked Toledo best, but he got along in all of them. He knew if you played on some streets, they called the police, and on others they tossed you pennies and nickels and the children danced. He learned that Manhattan never has tired of "Sidewalks of New York," and that Washington and Baltimore have yet to hear too much of "Dixie."

If things had been normal this year, Pete would have been out in the shed in back of his house with the first thaw, furbishing his hurdy-gurdy's exterior, cleaning its roll. And the whole business would have been sent up to Philadelphia for a new set of tunes. But new tunes cost $50, and freight is $12 extra. Pete's no longer in the money.

From 8 in the morning until 8:30 in the evening, Pete and his hurdy-gurdy are on the streets. They try to cover the town, but some sections are hilly and Pete likes the plains. They're not so tough on the back. Pete turned 70 his last birthday.

But it will make no difference where you live. If you need a touch of spring, go over to Q street. But don't ask for Pietro. Everyone calls him Pete.

Chemical Chapter Granted Virginia

Engineers to Hold First Ceremony Tuesday.

Charlottesville, Va., April 29 (AP). The Chemical Engineering Society of the University of Virginia has been granted a student chapter by the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, it was announced here today. Installation ceremonies will be held at a banquet at University of Virginia commons Tuesday.

The guest speaker will be Harry A. Curtis, vice president of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. Among other guests will be Dr. J. L. Newcomb, president of the university; Dean W. S. Rodman, of the school of engineering, and Dr. L. B Hitchcock, professor of chemical engineering and secretary of the student chapter committee of the institute.

It is the first chapter organized in Virginia, the fifth in the South and the thirty-fifth affiliated with the institute. Its present officers are H. R. Davis, Norfolk, president; R. H. Holy Name Again Elects Aiello, Codd

Rev. Fitzgerald and Rev. Nevils Address Gathering.

Caesar Aiello, of Hyattsville, and Leo Codd, of Washington, were re-elected diocesan and district heads of the Baltimore Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies by 1,000 delegates representing organizations here and in western and southern Maryland meeting in annual convention at Georgetown University yesterday.

Mr. Aiello, an attorney with Washington offices, was continued in office as general president of the union. Mr. Codd was given another term as president of the Washington section of the society.

The influence of the colonists on religion and the "fundamental virtue" of reverence were discussed by the Very Rev. Edward Gregory Fitzgerald, of the Dominican House of Studies, Catholic University, and the Very Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University, principal speakers at a patriotic and religious meeting which closed the convention on the university campus.

Meeting for the first time at Georgetown, the oldest Catholic institution of higher learning in the United States, the convention commemorated the 300th anniversary of the founding of Maryland and the establishment of religious liberty in America.

By their tolerance of other religious faiths, the early Maryland settlers set a precedent for liberty of worship that has been a leading factor in the development of the Nation, Father Fitzgerald told the delegates.

"Reverence is the secret of all religion and all happiness," declared Father Nevils. "Without reverence there is no faith, no hope."

The convention opened with the celebration of solemn high mass in Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown. The Rev. Joseph A. McEnearny, pastor, was the celebrant, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Eugene J. Connelly delivered the sermon. Luncheon in the school hall and a business meeting followed.

Health, Play Themes of D. C. May Day Fete

Outdoor Games, Dances to Be Held Tomorrow in Many Places Here.

Health and pageantry in the spring sun will form the background for the celebration by Washington children tomorrow of the National May Day-Child Health Day fertival, under the supervision of various public and private agencies, Mrs. William A. Roberts, secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, announced yesterday.

"While the activities planned by the different organizations represented in our committee will stress health as the main objective, this motive is not to obscure the spirit of play and happiness with which the day has been associated in ancient times," asserted Mrs. Roberts.

Outdoor games and May pole dances will be held in many places, Mrs. Roberts said, while in every proper way the importance of health, and the checking up of the bodily condition of children will be stressed. Parents will be urged to have their children examined and take all possible precautions against the coming of sickness.

Ancient Custom Revived.

The ancient custom of letting children hang May flower baskets on the door knobs of neighborhood houses will be revived, when flowers will be presented to Mrs. Roosevelt, at the White House, by youngsters under the direction of Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, of the Tuberculosis Association.

The girls of Friendship House will gather wild flowers in the country and take them to the shut-ins of the neighborhood.

By order of Superintendent of Schools Ballou, the schools of the city will devote the day to a variety of child games and plays, with athletic contests on playgrounds and indoor programs.

Queen to Be Crowned.

One of the most extensive indoor programs will take place at the Wheatley School, under the title of "America in the Making." This includes the crowning of the "Queen of Success" and the costumed representation of the various nations who helped settle and develop the United States.

All public playgrounds are to be the scenes of May Day demonstrations, Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the playground department, announced. At the Christ Child Society headquarters, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast, dental clinics for the free examination of children will be open Tuesday, and each day of the week thereafter.

Other health programs are being held by the Tuberculosis Association, the Mothers' Club, numerous parent-teachers associations, Howard University, the Social Hygiene Society and the Y. W. C. A. The boys clubs of the city will compete in a swimming meet at the Y. M. C. A.

Yankees, Aided by Ruth's Homer, Defeat Red Sox, 3-2 Before 50,000

Winning Run Driven In By Gehrig

Gomez Misses Shutout as Hoag Lets Ball Go Through Legs.

N. Y. Pitcher Allows Six Hits and Fans Five; Weiland Loser.

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP).—Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig combined to give the Yankees a 3-to-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox today and a split in the two-game series.

Babe Ruth cheered a crowd of 50,000 by clouting his third homer of the season to tie the score in the eighth, while Lou's single drove in the winning run in the ninth.

An error by Myril Hoag in center field cost Lefty Gomez a shutout in his duel with Bob Weiland. Hoag let Julius Solters' hit go through his legs to pave the way for the two Boston runs in the fourth. Gomez allowed only six hits and fanned five, while Weiland chalked up nine whiffings.

Nats' Ninth-Inning Heroes

30,500 Watch Tribe Beat Tigers

Largest Sunday Crowd in Detroit in Two Years Sees Team Bow, 7-1.

DETROIT, April 29 (AP).—Playing before a throng of 30,500, the largest Sunday crowd Navin Field has attracted in two years, the Detroit Tigers dropped the third game of their series with the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 1, today.

Nine doubles, six of them by the Indians, featured the hitting. Cleveland put on a four-run spurt in the eighth to send them comfortably ahead of the Tigers, but the game really was lost in the fifth when the Indians got to Marberry for four hits and three runs.

Marberry worked until the close of the seventh when he was taken out in favor of a pinch hitter, Auker succeeding him on the mound.

Auker Off Badly.

The latter was in difficulties from the start, Rogell muffing Pytlak's easy fly ball as the inning opened. Then Averill walked and Vosmik doubled to score Pytlak. Trosky was safe at first on a fielder's choice and Hale lined into a doubled play which Owen worked unassisted, catching Averill off third. E. Moore then doubled to left field scoring Vosmik and Knickerbocker sent a double into the same area to score Moore.

Hildebrand pitched a tight game, allowing the Tigers but three hits while he was on the mound. He was taken out in the seventh when Detroit threatened. The Tigers' lone run was scored off Hildebrand, resulting from Greenberg walking and then coming in on Fox's double. L. Brown, who succeeded Hildebrand, allowed the Tigers three hits for the balance of the game. Marberry and Auker were touched for eleven hits.

Nats' 2 Runs In 9th Beat A's, 7-6

man. Jimmy doubled him home, putting the visitors in front again. Russell was then given his seventh assignment in the 11 games the Nats have played and he and Thomas had things well under control until the end.

Bill Dietrich, who had relieved Harry Matuzak, who relieved Starter Johnny Marcum, was the victim of the Nats' winning rally in the ninth. Joe Kuhel started things off by singling cleanly to center and he advanced on a passed ball while Dietrich was trying to keep Buddy Myer from sacrificing. The Mackian pitcher was so successful in his efforts in this respect that he finally walked Buddy. Heinie Manush was instructed to lay one down and he did it to the Queen's taste.

Fouls First Two.

The fans were not particularly optimistic when Cronin quickly got in a hole by fouling Dietrich's first two offerings, but the Nat manager, with that prominent jaw of his protruding and his teeth gritting, took a toe-hold, another swing, and this time the ball shot over first past Rightfielder Ed Coleman and the ball game was over.

Soon after the game started, the Nats' chances of winning did not appear to be worth a penny. Crowder walked Finney, Foxx later singled him to third and this pair then negotiated a double steel for first run. Another was coined in the second when Higgins and McNair singled in rapid order, both advanced on a sacrifice, and the first-named tallied after Manush's catch of Marcum's long fly.

Finney started the A's three-run splurge in the third by singling to center and Coleman drew the second of the three walks credited to him during the game. Foxx picked out this spot for his four-bagger, three runners crossed the plate, and Crowder was chased out of the box by Cronin.

Burke Hurls Well.

Burke hurled brilliantly for the next four innings, granting but one single and a base on balls. After he gave way to a pinch-hitter, Prim started work in the seventh and the A's almost immediately started to work on him. He walked Coleman, Foxx doubled the runner home, and Cronin walked Prim. This blow of Foxx's was the last credited the A's; in fact, Jimmy was the last Mackman to enjoy base-life during the regimes of Russell and Thomas.

The Nats got two runs back in the third, the result of singles by Burke, Myer and Manush and Kuhel's walk, which came between the first two of these blows. They registered again in the fifth after Kuhel singled, Myer walked, Manush contributed a useful out and Cronin came through with a long run-scoring fly.

In the sixth, the home gang knotted the string and might have won the game then and there had Moe Berg, like race horses, not carried a lot of weight under the number on his back. Stone opened by coaxing a pass and Travis singled him to second. Berg sacrificed and was thrown out at first even though Pitcher Matuzak first fumbled the ball and then temporarily could not locate it. A little speed and Berg would have been safe, filling the bases. Pinch-Hitter Gus Dugas hit a long fly, which scored one run, and Kuhel tripled home the other.

Doubled at Second.

A golden opportunity was passed up in the seventh when Manush, after having opened with a single and advancing on Cronin's suicide, tried to score on Schulte's pop to short right. It would have worked out all right except that Heinie did not figure on Warstler's speed afoot and he was doubled up at second as a matter of form when the alien second sacker made a brilliant catch of the looper.

Bob Johnson's error on Berg's fly gave the Nats some hope in the eighth, but it was not until their final chance that they were able to snatch the game out of the fire.

Although Cronin's double was the telling one of the game, it would not have loomed as large as it did had it not been for Kuhel. The first sacker scored three runs and drove in another, his batting record for the day being a walk, two singles and a triple in five chances at the plate.

Five Virginia Athletes Are Elected to Council

Charlottesville, Va., April 29 (Spl.).—Five prominent student athletes at the University of Virginia were yesterday elected to the athletic council by the general student body.

Those selected from a group of a dozen candidates are:

Pirates Beat Reds In Game of Homers

Landis and 20,000 See Pittsburgh Win, 9-5.

Pittsburgh, April 29 (AP).—With Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, and a crowd of 20,000 fans cheering them on, the Pittsburgh Pirates today defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 5, in the first Sunday major league game ever played in Pittsburgh.

The weather was ideal for the crowd, and, apparently, for home runs also. Shiver, Suhr, Sylvester Johnson and Paul Waner all connected for four-base hits.

Red Lucas, who came to the Pirates in a big winter deal, achieved a triumph over his old bunkmates, but the sorrel top was in plenty of trouble. Southpaw Joe Shaute started for the Reds, the Pirates reaching him for four runs in three innings and were never headed.

Jim Weaver in Form; Browns Down Chisox

St. Louis, April 29 (AP).—One big inning, the third, in which they scored four runs, gave the St. Louis Browns a 6-to-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox today and an even break in their abbreviated series.

The wildness of Leslie Tietje, a recruit, helped the Browns in their big inning. Big Jim Weaver allowed only four hits, including a home run by Al Simmons, but he was in trouble at times due to wildness, walking six batters. Only about 3,000 fans turned out for the game.

Pitt Defeats Shorey for Golf Title

Takes Match on 17th After Kenwood Star Cut 4-Up Lead.

By Dave Herman.

PLAYING his shots meticulously and taking advantage of his opponent's erratic performance on 9 of the 17 holes, Harry G. Pitt, pride of the Manor Club, defeated John Shorey, of Kenwood, yesterday, 3 and 1, to win the first Belle Haven Country Club invitation golf tournament.

Pitt outsteadied Shorey from the very outset, and never once found himself down to the former "Boy Wonder" of the District. Long and fairly straight off the tee, the Manor Moose chipped and pitched with uncanny accuracy at the opportune moments, and sank a number of putts that proved to be all important.

With the largest gallery of the five-day tournament on hand, Pitt grabbed the lead on the first hole, and by the time he rounded the turn, the Manor star had built himself a comfortable 4 up advantage, that Shorey might have wiped out had he not come to grief on the 155-yard sixteenth hole. Here the Kenwood entry, only 1 down, clouted his shot into Government territory just a foot or so over the out-of-bounds line. This cost him a 5, and Pitt won the hole with a 4. That one shot seemed to dishearten Shorey, for, with only two holes to go and 2 down, the former District junior champion sliced his drive into a ditch, barely extricated the ball, and wound up with a 6, as Pitt was putting for a birdie 4.

Keenly Contested.

The match was keenly contested, and was featured by Shorey's courageous comeback on the stretch. After Pitt took the first hole when his rival's second and third shots hit trees, Shorey three-putted the second for a half in 6. Pitt became 2-up by bagging the fourth. Shorey captured the fifth with a par 4 by sinking a curling 4-footer, but he lost the sixth, a 557-yarder, when his third shot caught a trap. Pitt got his five. Pitt went 3-up on the short seventh when Shorey dumped his drive into the watery trap. Out-of-bounds with his drive on the eighth, Shaorey lost the hole to Pitt's conceded birdie four, and they halved the home hole in fours, as both recovered beautifully from the deep trap flanking the green.

Shorey came to life on the tenth hole, which he won with a birdie four, laying his approach dead to the pin, as Pitt struggled for a five after knocking his tee shot out of bunds. A dubbed second shot cost Shorey the eleventh, but the Kenwood star made a brilliant recovery on the twelfth to win the hole with a birdie three. Ditched on his drive, he niblicked out to within 15 feet of the pin, and nailed his putt. Shorey dropped an 8-footer for his third birdied in four holes on the thirteenth to cut Pitt's lead to 2 up. On the long fifteenth, Shorey made another great recovery for a win. woods, got out nicely with an iron, He hooked his second into the and laid his approach "stoney"—1 foot from the pin for a five. Pitt was trapped on his third, and his try from 8 feet for a half failed.

Pitt played safely on the sixteenth and seventeenth, as Shorey went out of bounds on the former hole, and ruined his chances with a ditched drive on the latter.

Three Over Par.

Pitt went out in 38, only 2 over par, and was only 3 over standard figures when the battle ended on the seventeenth green.

The new champion will meet J. W. Harvey, jr., of Manor, in the medal play-off next Sunday.

In the consolations of the first flight, Sid Sharwood, home club champion, defeated Hickman Greene, of Argyle, 2 and 1.

Heurich Brewers Win Over All-Stars, 17-4

Front Royal, Va., April 29 (Spl.). The Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., pounded three All-Star pitchers for 18 hits to take an easy 17-to-4 victory here this afternoon. The visitors tallied ten times in the first inning on seven hits, three walks and an error.

Joseph, with four hits, and Knight, with three, led the visitors at bat, while Shelton also collected a home run and a double. Lacy McFall and Huffman were the best for the Stars. Both teams gave a ragged exhibition in the field. The two teams play here again next Sunday.

Maranville, Using Crutches, Full of Cheer, Guest at Game

RABBIT MARANVILLE, the irrepressible veteran infielder of the Boston Braves, who will be wise-cracking as he takes his last breath, paused in Washington yesterday en route to his Rochester, N. Y., home, and hobbled out to Griffith Stadium to watch the Nats battle the Athletics.

The Rabbit, you know, suffered a double fracture of his left leg in a game at St. Petersburg, Fla., several weeks ago that threatened to terminate his baseball career, but the lure of big league baseball, to which he has given 22 of his 42 years, was still compelling yesterday and he attended the game with Mrs. Maranville.

Although on crutches, the grizzled-visaged Rabbit burst into the Nats' locker room literally bubbling over with joy at getting back in baseball atmosphere. He had a good word and a pat on the back for every player and was the center of attraction as Cronin and his charges crowded around him.

Spurns Sympathy.

"Tough luck, Rabbit," most of the Nats exclaimed in greeting, but the peppy veteran was not looking for sympathy.

"Tough luck, the devil," the Rabbit replied. "You got to take the bad with the good and I'm not kicking. I'll be back soon and then watch me go."

Maranville's left leg was broken twice, it seems, as he was sliding into the plate. The physicians rebroke and set one bone the second day after the injury; set the other a few days later and the patient has worn a cast from the top of his foot all the way up. Last week the arch of his foot and the toes were set, and the cast will be removed in about a week. The Rabbit will then go to work strengthening it up. He expects to get back in the Braves' line-up no later than July 1.

Maranville's chief complaint during his convalescence was the dreams he had which woke him up several times nightly. "I was always stealing a base, chasing a fly, or something," he said, "and I'd wake up the whole hospital hollering 'tag him,' 'I'll take it,' or arguing with the umpire.

Isn't Through Yet.

"But the worst of it is over now and you fellows can bet that the old Rabbit isn't through yet. In fact, he'll come back bigger and better—and fresh, when the other guys are showing signs of wear and tear."

"Gosh! Do you want me to jinx him?" was his parting shot, as he hobbled out on his crutches to pose for a picture with Manager Joe Cronin.

The Rabbit saw the game in state in the President's box after being called on to make a sweeping bow when the loud speaker informed the cash customers that he was the game's guest of honor.

"Marsa" Joe McCarthy leads his 1934 edition of New York Yankees into our midst this afternoon. His infield has been recamped with the addition of Red Rolfe at short and Don Heffner, former Oriole, at second, but otherwise the team is about the same, with the "Slamese" twins—Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig—listed to play the leading roles, as in the past.

Lefty Earl Whitehill, who has been suffering frmo a cold in his back, will definitely learn whether or not it is cured in thsi game, for he will start on the hill for the Nats. Donny MacFaylen probably will do the alien twirling.

Umpires McGowan and Owens teamed up well in the second inning yesterday and actually showed that they wanted the game played on merit and with their own pride cutting no figure. With Travis on first, Marcum failed to step out of the pitcher's box soon enough when making a fake throw to first. McCronin's request, he consulted Owens, who said it was and Travis was allowed to proceed to second.

After Kuhel had opened the home fifth with a single, Matuzak pitched seven successive balls to Myer and Manush. Then he worked the count to three and two on the latter and forced him to hit into a force-play.

Dodgers Beat Phils, 8-7, To End Losing Streak

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP).—Two four-run rallies, one in the fifth inning and the other in the eighth, enabled Brooklyn to defeat the Phillies, 8 to 7, today to break a losing streak which had extended to four games.

Wildness of four Phil hurlers, Moore, Davis, Hansen and Pearce, who issued 12 bases on balls, materially aided the Dodgers.

The Phillies jumped into a six-run lead in the second inning when they nicked Beck and Carroll for six hits which were mixed with a base on balls and a hit batsman. Leonard was the winning hurler and Pearce the loser.

Hecht Company Defeats Lansburgh, 11-8, as Department Store League Opens

Palais Royal And Kann's Tie, 8-8

First Frays Under Post Association Marked by Free Hitting.

BIGGER and better sandlot baseball season for the Capital wos officially launched yesterday under the guiding hand of the newly-formed Washington Post Baseball Association as the fast Department Store League swung into action amid appropriate ceremonies in the presence of a number of prominent store officials on the Monument Grounds.

The heavy-hitting Mecht Co. ball tossers gave the elaborately-panned season's program of the association a rousing send-off as they pounded out an 11-to-8 victory over the Lansburgh Bros. nine on Diamond No. 4 to gain the distinction of rolling up the first win recognized by the new commission. Kann's and Palais Royal battled to a nip-and-tuck 8-all tie on No. 3 diamond in the other league opener.

Large Crowds at Games.

Large early-seasoned crowds were on hand for the initial games to be played under The Post Association, as A. C. Case, general manager of the Palais Royal threw out the first ball for the Kann-Palais Royal game with league officials looking on.

While the control of the Palais Royal manager, one of the association's most enthusiastic supporters, was not quite as accurate as his intentions, the spirit of the occasion rode as high as his pitch and the league rolled off to an auspicious start.

Among the other officials participating in the opening exercises were J. Frank Brown of Kann's; H. Malone, of Hecht's, and Thomas H. Mullenberg, president of the league. The impressive turn-out to greet the opening games supervised by the ne wPost body betokened a rejuvenation of sandlot interest this season which has been one of the chief objectives in the formation of the association.

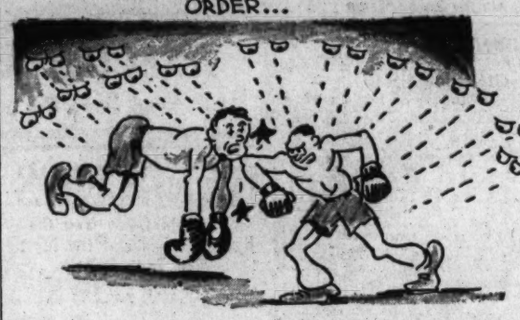
GEORGE, WHO NOW LIVES IN WASHINGTON, STILL KEEPS THOSE SWIVEL-ACTION ELBOWS, WHICH EARNED HIM HIS NICKNAME, IN GOOD WORKING ORDER...



"YA GOTTA BE CAREFUL AN' FAST TO HIT WITH THE ELBOWS," SAYS GEORGE. "THERE'S A MILLION EYES WATCHIN' YA!"

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Pimlico Race Track, April 29.

Dear Al:

Back to Baltimore, fellow, with the same good service. This ancient track opens operations tomorrow with an eight-race program and it seems that every horse in this part of the country is crowded into the entries. Big fields and big prices, that looks like the dish here at the home of the totalisor. Clocker Mike gave me a keen run for my money in the Chesapeake yesterday. You know he picked Agrarian and I took Cavalcade. They finished one, two, with Mrs. Bennings' Bill on top as usual. We formed an entry tonight and thumbed all the pages in the speed books trying to dig up something of a profitable nature. We shall see what we shall see. BILL.

First race—Motto had just too much opposition in that last outing and did not fare so well. Gets a good inside post position tomorrow and appears as good a pick as anything in the race. Vanda Cerulea is regarded as a promising filly, despite that poor race in her only outing. Must break from the outside, however. 'Vicaress showed an encouraging effort. Deserves a money place.

Second race—Bannach Lath came out of winter retirement to run a smashing race and apparently will improve off that tightener. 'Sun Monk may be a sleeper. Blue Foam, in present shape, can not be overlooked entirely.

Third race—Silverskin is reported fit and ready for this steeplechase. He is a clean fencer and should give a good account of himself.' Quick March has had a race on the flat and will be in the thick of this battle. Dock Light to take care of the others.

Fifth race—I'm going to give Dawnchild another chance. Gets in with only 102 pounds and off those fine attempts at Havre de Grace this one should earn a set of brackets. Lawless Lady and Saint Kitts have edges on the others.

Sixth race—Fogbound turned in sizzling trials and then showed nothing in competition. Might dhave found racing legs in that last effort, however, and if up to a real race will be hard to beat. Happy Go and Sky Haven to complete the money picture.

Seventh race—Wilrob surprised over cheaper one sat Bowie. This fellow is dead fit and Clocker Mike says he can handle this kind of a field. I'm tsringing along. Crazy Jane and Vacillate for the other awards.

Eighth race—Axentea goes in cheaper company here and I expect Merritt to ride a winner. Kibitzer is ready to win soon and is dangerous. The Doctor to show.

Lead in Southeastern Retained by Alabama

Atlanta, April 29 (AP).—The University of Alabama Club added two more triumphs to its record last week and retained its Southeastern Conference baseball leadership.

Alabama now has 11 victories and 1 defeat against 6 wins and 1 loss for Mississippi State.

The standings:

Miller, Dundee In Title Bouts This Week

Meet Dazzo and Diamond; Walter Neusel Faces Tommy Loughran.

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP).—Title defenses by Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, and Vince Dundee, of Newark, and a further testing of the heavyweight championship aspirations of young Walter Neusel, of Germany, feature the National boxing schedule this week.

Dundee, middleweight champion, stakes his title in a 15-rounder against Al Diamond, of Paterson, N. J., in Diamond's home town Thursday night.

Finalists Call Off Virginia Title Play

Hot Springs, Va., April 29 (AP).—The 1934 men's singles chamionship of the Virginia State tennis tournament will remain unclaimed.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, who were due to meet for the title, agreed to forego the contest after postponement became necessary yesterday when it was scheduled.

It was considered possible last night that the singles would be played off today, but Allison and Van Ryn agreed to let the matter drop.

College Brain Trust Visions NRA's Failure

Student Group Sees Trade Control by Government Experts in Future.

Seattle, April 29 (AP).—The NRA will be superseded by industrial regulation through Government experts—that's the prediction of the University of Washington's youthful "brain trust" after three days' cogitation about America's politico-economic situation.

The young "brain trust," composed of 60 outstanding students appointed by President Hugo Winkenwerder, spent one day in studying the condition of the country, one day in deciding how it could be changed and the third day in planning the "ideal social state."

Dr. Winkenwerder said he wanted to put the students to work on practical, rather than theoretical, problems.

"I don't know that they will solve anything," he said, "but the exercise of trying to find a practical remedy for the ills of the country, as set forth in the newspapers every day, will do them good."

Here's their solution of the country's economic troubles:

"The political-economic organization of the future must be under the control of intelligent experts, operating in the interests of all."

The NRA won't succeed, they said, because the present price index, with the 1922-25 period used as the norm, stands at 111, while wages are at 53, the difference making it impossible for the consumer to purchase enough goods.

"The near future will see a remarkable extension of Government regulation of business, if economic catastrophe is to be averted," the young economists said.

"Present trends indicate a failure of self-regulation in industry, because of excessive profit-taking under code protection, without a proportionate distribution of wealth to consumers."

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

More than a century's service in the clerk's office of Fairfax County, Virginia, is represented in the careers of F. W. Richardson, present incumbent, and his father, the late Capt. Ferdinand Dawson Richardson. The father served 50 years, the son is rounding out his fifty-fourth year. The drawing above is after a photograph taken several years ago.

Capt. Richardson first became a deputy county clerk under William Moss in 1830, later becoming clerk of the county and circuit courts. Upon his death in the fall of 1880 his son, then 27 years old, was appointed to finish the term.

This appointment was affirmed by voters at the next county election, and the younger Mr. Richardson was elected for another term. Since then he has served continuously. The present term of office will expire the last of next year.

Mr. Richardson, present county clerk, who describes himself as "a Methodist, Mason and old-time Democrat," was a delegate to the national convention in Denver in 1908, at which William Jennings Bryan was nominated as candidate for the Presidency.

He has voted for every Democratic President since Samuel J. Tilden, and he and his father have been continuous subscribers to The Washington Post since 1876.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Ages of Cans.

Eliza Jenkins Jones, she took some marrowbones, and made a soup that made me whoop with joy, in ardent tones. When she was cooking soup its fragrance filled the coop, imparting pep to languid step, to souls inclined to droop. At times she would repair out to the garden fair, and gather beans and other greens, a dinner to prepare. Where are the good old dames who played their homely games, and cooked such meals as no one deals these days to human frames? Where are the kindly Janes who took exceeding pains to make their pies of adult size and free from glucose stains? Where, in the name of Pete, is Bridget, fair and sweet, whose dishes seem to haunt our dream, as something of a treat? Where are the Mary Anns, who wrought with pots and pans? They've looped the loops, and in our coops we eat our grub from cans. Our innards seldom feel a good old home-cooked meal; our faith is pinned on victuals tinned, baked beans and pickled eel. It is the modern plan to open up a can of soup or fish or t'other dish, and warm it in a pan. This process saves much time, and also saves a dime; but nonetheless we must confess the system is a crime.

DO YOU SMOKE, MAJOR? AHEM! ARE YOU BY ANY CHANCE RELATED TO THE WALL STREET AMBUSH?
YES. QUITE SO, SWEET.
OH YES. AND THE MAJOR WISHES TO CONSULT US ABOUT...?
AFTER THE MAJOR AGREED TO MARRY ME, HE BEGAN TO WORRY ABOUT THE SIMPLY ABSURD NOTION THAT HE MIGHT BE ALREADY MARRIED.
YEARS AGO I LOST MY MEMORY. A PLAIN CASE OF MIASMA.
MIASMA? AHEM! AH... MAJOR, DO YOU MEAN AMNESIA?
THAT'S IT! WE WENT TO FOUR DOCTORS, BUT THE MAJOR WAS SO VAGUE ABOUT EVEN HIS SYMPTOMS THAT AFTER I MET YOU BOYS THE OTHER DAY THE MAJOR AND I DECIDED TO ASK YOUR HELP.

THE GUMPS Spreading the Good News

YES- I'M MRS. DE STROSS- WHAT DID YOU WANT TO SEE ME ABOUT?
I REPRESENT THE COLLECTION AGENCY OF GREAVE AND GROHN- WE HAVE A CLAIM FOR AN UNPAID MILLINERY BILL OF $217.22-
NOW- YOU DON'T HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT IT- YOU'LL GET YOUR MONEY FOR SURE THE END OF THIS MONTH-
I BEG YOUR PARDON, LADY- BUT THAT'S WHAT THEY ALL SAY- I WANT SOMETHING BETTER THAN PROMISES-
ALL RIGHT- SUPPOSE I TELL YOU THAT IN A WEEK OR TWO, WE EXPECT TO HAVE MILLIONS- MY DAUGHTER HAS A LAWSUIT PENDING AGAINST BIM GUMP THE BILLIONAIRE AND HE'S GOING TO SETTLE OUT OF COURT FOR TEN MILLION WITHIN TWO WEEKS-
ALL RIGHT THEN - IF YOU'RE SURE OF GETTING $10,000,000.- I'LL DEPEND ON YOUR PAYING THAT $217.22 BY THE END OF THE MONTH- BUT WE CAN'T WAIT ANY LONGER-

SO SPEEDILY DID JUNIOR RETURN TO TOWN AND TELL TRACY OF SPALDONI'S HIDEOUT IN THE ABANDONED STEEL MILL AND SO QUICKLY DID THE DETECTIVE SPEED TO THE SCENE THAT THE DESPERADOS WERE CAUGHT COMPLETELY OFF GUARD.
WHAT TH...?
YEAH - I KNOW YOU DIDN'T EXPECT ME SO SOON.. BUT MY SYSTEM OF CATCHING CROOKS IS TO ACT FAST AND SURPRISE 'EM! SEARCH THEM, JUNIOR!
WHILE JUNIOR FRISKS THE CROOKS - TRACY FAILS TO NOTICE SPALDONI'S HAND DRAWING CLOSER AND CLOSER TO A DANGLING CHAIN....
LOOK OUT, TRACY!

WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner Home, Sweet Home

YOU'VE DONE EXCELLENT WORK, W. I. B.! YOU'VE EARNED A VACATION! I'LL CALL YOU WHEN I NEED YOU! MEANWHILE, ENJOY YOURSELF!
THANKS, CHIEF!
AFTER ALL THE EXCITEMENT I'VE BEEN THRU, I'LL BE GLAD TO GET HOME FOR A LITTLE REST AND QUIET!!
I TELL YOU I DIDN'T DO IT AND DON'T YOU SAY I DID!!
WAH! I GET SPANKED FOR NOTHIN'!!
BOO HOO
DID I SAY "REST AND QUIET" ???
